2. (c) that the ward is, on reasonable grounds not inconsistent with the law to which he is subject, unwilling to return, and, having attained to years of discretion, is capable of exercising a wise choice as to the custody in which he will remain.

(c) that the whole or any part of the proceeds of the act permitted shall be paid into the Court by the guardian to be invested by the Court on prescribed securities or otherwise disposed of as the Court directs.

(4) Before granting permission to a guardian to do an act mentioned in the last foregoing section the Court may cause notice of the application for the permission to be given to any relative or friend of the ward who should, in its opinion, receive notice thereof, and shall hear, and record the statement of, any person who appears in opposition to the application.

26. (1) Where a guardian of the property of a ward has been appointed or declared by the Court, the Court may from time to time, by order, define, restrict or extend his powers with respect to the property of the ward in such manner and to such extent as it may consider to be for the advantage of the ward and consistent with the law to which the ward is subject.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Guardian and Ward is based on opinions elicited by a reference to Local Governments and High Courts on the subject of certain defects in the law relating to the guardianship of minors, and its object is to provide a law of Guardian and Ward applicable as far as possible to all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in British India.

2. Among the enactments which the Bill will supersede are Act XL of 1858 and portions of the Madras Code, relating to minors in the Presidencies of Bengal and Madras who are not European British subjects and are not under the superintendence of a Court of Wards; Act XX of 1864, relating to minors in the Presidency of Bombay who are not European British subjects; Act IX of 1861, relating to the custody and guardianship of minors who are not European British subjects; and Act XIII of 1874, relating to the guardianship of European British minors in territories beyond the jurisdiction of the chartered High Courts.

3. The Bill, which follows generally the frame of Act XIII of 1874, is drawn as applicable to all District Courts and High Courts (including the chartered High Courts) and to minors of all creeds and races. But it does not take away any of the powers at present possessed by the chartered High Courts, and it provides that, in the selection of guardians and other matters, regard shall be had to the personal law of the minor. The jurisdiction and authority of Courts of Wards are expressly saved and will not be in any way affected by the proposed law.

4. One effect of the assimilation of the law will be to do away with the rule, which obtains in the Presidencies of Bengal and Bombay, that no person shall be entitled to institute or defend any suit connected with a minor's estate of which he claims the charge until he has obtained a certificate of administration. It is proposed that suits by and against minors shall be regulated by Chapter XXXI of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that, in a Bill which is to be introduced to amend that Code, provision be inserted conferring, among other privileges, on a guardian who has been appointed, or whose title has been declared, under the Guardians and Wards law, a preferential right to be appointed next friend or guardian for the suit.

5. The several sections of the Bill which appear to call for remark will now be noticed in consecutive order.

6. Section 4, clause (1).—In connection with section 26, Act XL of 1858, section 30, Act XX of 1864, and section 2, Act XIII of 1874, the question arose whether the age of majority should be dealt with in the Bill. As there was no necessity to deal with it, it was considered expedient to avoid the difficulty of doing so by defining "minor," in the terms of section 11 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, as a person who has not reached the age of majority according to the law to which he is subject.

7. Section 4, clause (2).—"Guardian" has been so defined as to mean any person having the care of the person of a minor or of his property, or of both his person and property. The Bill, therefore, relates to guardians generally except where it is expressed to relate to particular classes of guardians.

8. Section 5.—This section follows Act XIII of 1874, which, in recognising in certain circumstances the right of a mother to appoint a guardian, was based on the New York Civil Code. The section goes beyond section 47 of the Indian Succession Act and beyond the English law. But under the English law an appointment by a mother is not now wholly ineffectual, and is likely at no distant date to be declared to be valid except in so far as it may interfere with an appointment by the father.

9. Sections 9 and 43.—The High Court and District Court will have concurrent jurisdiction, but the High Court may refuse an application with respect to the guardianship of a minor if in its opinion the application would be disposed of more justly or conveniently by a District Court. Where the application is with respect to the guardianship of the person of a minor, it is ordinarily to be made to the Court having jurisdiction in the place where the minor resides, that being the Court which can most effectively discharge the duties incident to the appointment of a guardian to the person of the minor.

10. Section 11, sub-section (2).—The sub-section follows an order made by the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces with a view to facilitating the discharge by Collectors of their duty of ascertaining and reporting to the Court of Wards from time to time what proprietors may come within the description of disqualified landholders.

11. Section 14, sub-section (4).—The rule laid down in this sub-section is, as explained by Sir Arthur Hobhouse with respect to the corresponding section in Act XIII of 1874, based solely on grounds of convenience.

12. Section 15, sub-section (5), and section 17.—As regards a minor who is a member of an undivided Hindu family, it seems to be generally admitted that it is desirable, as a rule, to leave him to his natural guardians without interference. But such a minor has certain rights in respect of the family property, and those rights are capable of being protected by a guardian. The guardian could not assume the management of the common property, and possibly he would, owing to the constitution of the co-ownership, be debarred from taking directly even a share in the management, and be confined to a mere power of control from without and a right in the last resort to demand a partition. But even this limited authority might in some cases be of great importance.

As regards the view hitherto taken by the Courts on this subject, it has indeed been held by the High Courts at Fort William and Bombay that Acts XL of 1858 and XX of 1864 could not be applied where the minor had no rights except as a member of an undivided Hindu family (I. L. R. 5 Cal. 219 and 3 Bom. 431, and 12 Bo. H. C. Rep. 247). Some doubt has been thrown on this view by the case before the Privy Council reported in I. L. R. 8 Cal. 656 (I. L. R. 6 Bom. 595 and 8 Bom. 396); but in any case it is a view which seems to be based on the peculiar wording of those Acts, which have been construed as contemplating an actual and (perhaps) corporeal taking charge of and management of some tangible property. In other words, these cases merely decide that under the particular Acts a manager cannot be appointed for a minor member of a pure joint family, not that such a manager is a thing inconceivable or impossible (I. L. R. 7 Cal. 369).

As regards the provisions of certain enactments which allow the Court of Wards to take charge only of the estate of a minor who is a sole owner (Act IV, 1872, section 35, Act XVII, 1876, section 161, and Bengal Act IX, 1879, section 7), they are to be accounted for by the fact that these enactments were designed mainly to guard against the risk of loss of revenue from an estate being left without any competent person in charge of it. That it was not considered impossible to take charge of the interest of a minor shareholder is manifest from Madras Regulations V of 1804, section 20, and X of 1831, section 3, and from the circumstance that section 14 of Act XL of 1858 and other similar enactments provide for the Collector taking charge of the share of a co-owner who is still a minor on the estate escaping from the management of the Court of Wards owing to the other co-owners having come of age. The Courts of Wards in the North-Western Provinces (Act XIX of 1873) and Central Provinces (Act XVII of 1885) are not precluded from assuming superintendence of the interest of a disqualified person who is a co-owner in an estate with other persons who are not disqualified.

It may be gathered from the proceedings of the Legislative Council, 1854-55, pages 672 et seq., that it was the intention of the framers of Act XL of 1858 that the Civil Court should appoint guardians for minors owning shares in estates, and it would seem that it is only owing to the peculiar wording of the Act, coupled perhaps with a natural disinclination on the part of the Courts to interfere between joint-owners, that that intention has been defeated.

13. Section 18.—This section lays down certain general propositions based on the fact that guardianship is a trust, and that the relationship between guardian and ward is one uberrimæ fidei, not only while it lasts, but even after it has ceased to exist.

14. Sections 24 and 25.—These sections are based on section 18 of the Acts of 1858 and 1864 and the corresponding section of the Act of 1874, on certain provisions in the Code of Lower Canada, and on suggestions received for the amendment of the Acts of 1858 and 1864. They provide that a guardian who has been appointed, or whose title has been declared, by the Court, shall not borrow for his ward, or transfer any part of the principal of his property, without the permission of the Court, and that the Court, before granting its permission, shall satisfy itself that the transaction proposed is either necessary or for the evident advantage of the ward, and, when granting the permission, shall itself record an order setting forth the necessity or advantage and the conditions subject to which it permits the loan to be taken or the transfer to be effected (I. L. R. 5 Cal. 363 and 6 Cal. 161).

These sections will be supplemented by rules made by the High Court under section 44.

15. Section 28, clause (a), and section 29.—These provisions are suggested by the case reported at I. L. R. 5 All. 248.

16. Section 32.—The rule contained in this section follows from guardianship being a trust. Though the right of survivorship is not acknowledged in England in the case of guardians appointed by the Court of Chancery, yet in practice the survivor or survivors will be re-elected by the Court without a reference. In America there is the right of survivorship among guardians appointed by the Court of Chancery.

17. Section 33.—A testamentary guardian may be removed under this section.

18. Section 41.—The cases reported at 15 W. R. 492 and 22 W. R. 479 have suggested the specification of the orders from which an appeal shall lie.

19. Acts XL of 1858 and XX of 1864 provide, in sections 27 and 31, respectively, that nothing in those Acts shall authorise the appointment of any person other than a female as the guardian of the person of a female. The cases reported at I. L. R. 10 Cal. 15 and 11 Cal. 574, and the remarks at pages 213-14 of Sayyid Amir Ali's Personal Law of Muhammadans, seem to render the re-enactment of the provision inexpedient. Section 15 of the Bill specifies the matters by which the Court is to be guided in appointing a guardian, and one of those matters is the law to which the minor is subject.

20. The provision of Act XX of 1864, that the legal heir of a minor, or the person next in succession to his property, may not be appointed guardian of the person of the minor, has not been repeated. It is considered that the appointment of such persons should not be absolutely prohibited. This was the opinion of the Supreme Council when Act XL of 1858 was about to be enacted (Proceedings of Legislative Council, 1858, pages 576-77), and is the opinion of the Hon'ble Mr. M. Melvill.

21. If the Bill becomes law in its present form, article 10 of Schedule I of the Court-fees Act, 1870, which applies only to the Presidencies of Bengal and Bombay, will become obsolete. It has, therefore, been included in the schedule of enactments to be repealed.

22. A table is appended showing how the principal enactments scheduled for repeal have been reproduced in the Bill or otherwise dealt with.

"The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with the registers of former years (at the Park-street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 1°·0 lower; and, finally, the thermometer, which furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's Office during 20 years and upwards, is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard thermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

Results of the Meteorological Observations taken at the Alipore Observatory from 28th March to 3rd April 1886.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograp

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All t thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at t Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four fe above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 8 formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in th Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

Separate accounts, under section 10 of Act XI of 1859, were opened in respect of the 3 shares from which arrears are due. These shares were once put up to sale for arrears of revenue on the 5th January last, and the bid at which the said shares were knocked down was below the amount due to Government. Against this sale an appeal was preferred to the Commissioner of the division, who upset the sale on the 19th March last on grounds of illegality, and directed to take steps under section 14 of the sale law. Accordingly a notice was served upon the proprietors, but no one paid the arrears. Hence the entire mehal is now advertised for sale.

Tipperah Collectorate, the 7th April 1886.

F. H. B. SKRINE, Offg. Collector.

ACTS OF THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL IN COUNCIL.

Number and year.	Subject.	Extent of repeal.
Act IV of 1876	To consolidate and amend the law relating to the Municipal affairs of Calcutta.	The whole.
Act VI of 1881	To amend "The Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, 1876."	The whole.
Act I of 1882 ...	To further amend the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, 1876.	The whole.
Act III of 1884	To amend and consolidate the laws relating to Municipalities.	In the second schedule the words "Suburbs of Calcutta."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Committee appointed in 1885 to consider the recommendations made in many quarters in favour of the amalgamation of a portion of the suburbs of Calcutta with the town having reported in favour of this measure, the Lieutenant-Governor having concurred in this report, and the Government of India having signified its approval of the proposal in its main outlines, it is now necessary to legislate in order to give effect to the decision which has been arrived at.

The primary object therefore of this Bill is to introduce such modifications into the existing municipal law for Calcutta as are necessary to adapt it to the enlarged area in which it will be in force.

The opportunity is, however, taken to review the present Municipal Act in the light of the experience of its working for nearly ten years. Time has as usual revealed many defects in details. These it is desirable to remedy as far as possible in the new Act.

Legislation on questions of such importance to the metropolis, and likely to lead to great difference of opinion in respect to the principles and details, should evidently be very deliberate. All that is now attempted therefore is to present for public consideration a draft Bill which embodies the main outlines of the proposed measure. Many months will elapse before the next step is taken to pass it into law.

In effecting the amalgamation, care has been taken to protect the rate-payers of the town against loss owing to the diversion of their rates and taxes for the benefit of the new area to be added to Calcutta. The rates and taxes levied throughout the enlarged area will be uniform, and it should obviously be the endeavour of the new Corporation to bestow on all parts of the municipality similar advantages, so far as time and circumstances permit. The natural effect of this would be that money would flow, as it does in all similar cases, from the centre to the extremities. To compensate for this the Government proposes to give up the contribution now paid by the town and suburbs to the police. This is estimated at about 3 lakhs of rupees per annum, nine-tenths of which is paid by the town. What the present rate-payers of the town will gain by this remission is estimated as approximately equivalent to what they will lose by amalgamation with a more sparsely populated and poorer tract.

It is proposed to levy a conservancy rate with the same maximum as the police rate and from the same class of rate-payers. By this means the rate-payers of the town will be in a position to contribute annually about Rs. 2,80,000 towards the improvement of the area amalgamated with it, without being any worse off quâ taxation than they are at present.

It is also proposed to allow a storage fee, which may be raised with the consent of Government to a maximum of four annas a case (though two annas is the rate contemplated) on all petroleum brought within municipal limits for storage or consumption. Petroleum passing through Calcutta and not stored in it, will not be liable to this tax

So far as the town is concerned, all that is aimed at is to guard the rate-payers against loss owing to the proposed change. It is intended that the entire boon coming from the remission of the police rate should go to the suburbs, which will thus receive, including the remaining fraction of its own police rate, which is to be remitted, an augmentation of three lakhs a year to its resources. The rates and taxes will of course be raised to the Calcutta standard, and therefore the result anticipated by the measure may be approximately thus stated: that the resources of the area to be incorporated with the town will be increased by nearly 150 per cent., of which less than 100 per cent. will be paid by residents in the amalgamated area, and the rest will come from the taxation remitted by Government. The new corporation therefore ought to find itself in a position effectually to improve this area.

It is not necessary in introducing this Bill to include in it nearly all the amendments in matters of detail which are desirable. Those which have attracted most attention, as well as some which have been formulated in a recent memorial from the rate-payers and inhabitants of Calcutta, have been provided for, but the greater number, which require careful consideration, must be reserved for the Select Committee. It must not therefore be assumed, because the greater part of the existing Act is reproduced verbatim in this Bill, that it is supposed to need no alteration. It has been thought better that the bulk of such alterations should be made after opinions have been received from the two municipalities who are affected by the measure, who will, it is hoped, suggest such amendments as experience has indicated to be necessary, as well as after considering opinions from other associations or persons interested.

On the two important questions, however, of the elective franchise and of the general policy of the Act of 1876, this Bill already embodies such changes as primâ facie seem desirable. As regards the elective franchise, though these sections of the Act are entirely recast, it is not intended to effect any radical change in the system that now prevails in the town, except in requiring voting at the polling stations. The old qualification was the payment of Rs. 25: for this it is proposed for purposes of practical convenience to substitute ownership or tenancy of property valued at Rs. 300 per annum. This will be the same thing as the payment of Rs. 24, with rates at 8 per cent., and during the current year the owners' rates are at 8 and the occupiers' at 9 per cent. The sections regarding plural owners and occupiers are new, but they are only intended to legalise and regulate the existing practice, regarding which the present law is entirely silent. The circumstances under which members of a joint family, partners, or joint occupiers may vote are at present left entirely to the decision of the Chairman. The Bill proposes to legalise such votes up to a maximum of six for each separate property. A vote is also given to all the fellows and graduates of the Calcutta University. The qualification for Commissioners and electors is made the same. There is no practical necessity in Calcutta for making any distinction.

As regards the policy of the Act of 1876, it has been necessary to consider on the one hand the objections which have been made that the welfare of the town was sacrificed by that measure, as well as on the other the apprehensions of those who consider it so popular a boon that any change, unless in the direction of making it more popular, is to be deprecated.

The Bill as it at present stands steers a middle course between these extremes. It assumes that the Act of 1876 has been attended, as might have been anticipated, with some disadvantages, but that on the other hand these have been counterbalanced by great advantages in the wider interest taken in municipal affairs by the rate-payers and residents of the town, and in the greater popularity of the administration with the great bulk of the inhabitants. No change therefore is contemplated in the general electoral system, or in the proportion of nominated to elected Commissioners.

On the other hand, an institution has developed which was not provided for at all in the Act of 1876, and which was only recognised in the most succinct manner in the amending Act of 1881, viz. the Town Council. It does the work which was intended by the Act to be done by the Commissioners in ordinary meetings, and has proved so well adapted to the circumstances of the municipality that it has annually attracted to itself more and more influence, and is now a very important factor in the municipal machine. It seems very desirable that the constitution of this Council should be fixed by law. This is the more necessary because the constitution which has been evolved for it by circumstances, is in many respects very different from that which the Legislature would have determined. The laudable and natural desire of all those who take an interest in municipal affairs to share in its proceedings has led to its being composed of 30 members—a number far too large for the convenient or orderly despatch of committee work. Again, though one-third of the Council is composed of nominated Commissioners, those Commissioners are chosen by the whole number of Commissioners, the majority of whom are of course not nominated. Hence there is a probability that in a contest those nominated Commissioners will be elected to sit on the Town Council who least represent the body of nominated Commissioners. It seems evident that if a Town Council is needed as an important factor of the Corporation, and if one-third of its members are to be nominated Commissioners, the election should be made by the same person that selects the nominated Commissioners, namely the Lieutenant-Governor, and this is already the law at Bombay.

Again, of all objections brought against the constitution of the municipality under the Act of 1876, the most cogent perhaps is this: that business men to whom time means money, are unable to claim that share in the practical management of affairs which their experience and stake in the city renders desirable. This objection is thus stated in a recent memorial to Government already referred to:—"It is impossible in a city, where it may be said generally that every one is fully employed, that men of business habits should be found ready and able to devote long afternoons, week after week, to deliberations as protracted as those which frequently take place in the Calcutta Municipality. The present system entails enormous delays, and tends to exclude from municipal discussion gentlemen who from their position, experience, and business habits are eminently qualified to [illegible] municipal matters. In the city of Bombay a system has prevailed which is said to have worked satisfactorily, under which the executive work is concentrated in a far smaller body, the members of which receive a fee for their attendance, make it a regular matter of business to attend, and discharge their duties with more expedition than appears as a rule to be possible, with the large number and uncertain attendance at Calcutta."

It therefore seems desirable, now that the Town Council is to be recognised as an important branch of the municipality, that its number should be fixed by the Act at such a figure as is consistent with the ordinary despatch of committee work, that the Lieutenant-Governor should select the same proportion of members of the Town Council as he does of the Corporation, and that a fee should be paid for attendance at Town Council meetings. Provisions to this effect have therefore been introduced into the Bill.

In submitting the first draft of an important Bill of this magnitude, many defects in the wording of the sections may be discovered. Full opportunity will be found for remedying these defects when the Bill is under the detailed examination of the Select Committee.

THE following preliminary report of the Select Committee together with the Bill as preliminarily amended by it, is, by order of the President published for information:—

PRELIMINARY REPORT.

WE, the members of the Select Committee appointed to consider the provisions of the Bill for the Registration of Permanent Tenures, have the honour to submit this preliminary report.

2. We have considered the Bill and the communications noted in the margin, and we have made important changes in the Bill as referred to us for report. We have made these changes partly in order to bring the Bill into conformity with the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, and partly because we are of opinion that the scheme laid down in the original draft of the Bill required modification. We proceed to offer a brief explanation of each of these grounds of the action which we have taken in dealing with the Bill.

A memorial from the Behar Landholder's Association, dated 22nd February 1886.

3. When the Bill was introduced into Council in December 1884, the Tenancy Bill, which was then under consideration in the Council of the Governor-General, contained a chapter which embodied the putni sale law, and which included a provision which declared that the chapter relating to putni sales should be applicable to any tenures which might hereafter be registered under any law providing for the registration of tenures. The Bill also contained elaborate provisions for compelling the landlord to register transfers of, and succession to tenures, and for suits in Court to enforce such registration, if it were refused. In the Tenancy Act, as finally passed into law, all these provisions have disappeared. The chapter relating to putni sales has been omitted, and the sections regarding the registration of transfers have been modified so as simply to provide that a transfer or succession shall be notified to the landlord.

4. In the next place, the Bill, as introduced into Council and referred to us for report, was largely based upon a scheme put forward in a pamphlet issued by Mr. Mohini Mohun Roy. The Bill, it is true, did not entirely accept the proposals of the pamphlet. Under Mr. Mohini Mohun Roy's scheme, registration was to be entirely optional, and the registers were to be kept, and all proceedings for the sale of the tenures were to be taken in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The Bill, on the other hand, declared that the registers were to be kept by the Collector, and that the Government might declare registration to be compulsory in any specified local area. But in other respects the scheme of the pamphlet, so far as it related to registration, was generally followed, and in particular it was followed in the important provision which excluded all ex parte proceedings, and insisted upon the presence of both parties before the Court in all applications for the registration of a tenure, or for any changes subsequent to the original registration.

5. Having considered these sections in the light of the opinions which have been received, we think that the Bill should be materially modified, partly in order to remove misconceptions as to its object and meaning, and partly because some of its provisions appear unworkable in themselves, or inconsistent with the form in which the Tenancy Bill has been finally passed into law. It appears to us that much misunderstanding exists as to the objects and scope of the Bill. Though it is expressly declared to be a Bill for the registration of permanent tenures, we find it alleged in one* of the papers, that the Bill will involve the registration of nearly 10 millions of ryoti holdings, and will consequently lead to 8 or 9 millions of contested suits. Though the Bill is intended to create a register of titles, we find it objected in another† paper that the provisions of the existing law for the registration of deeds render it unnecessary and superfluous.

* Paper No. 1.

† Paper No. 9.

6. It seems to be generally apprehended that any legislation upon the lines of this Bill will result in an abundant harvest of litigation and dispute. We can only say that such information as we have at our command leads to an entirely opposite conclusion. One* of the papers relative to the Bill shows the number of cases instituted in each district in the Lower Provinces to contest the orders of the Collector under the Land Registration Act of 1876. The powers of the Collector under that Act are very extensive. He is authorized not only to determine summarily the fact of possession, but in disputed cases he may decide the right to possession, and may give possession accordingly; but any person is at liberty to contest his decision in a regular suit. We find, however, that the decision of the Collector has been contested in scarcely one case out of five hundred. In the districts of the Burdwan Division, 77,877 orders were passed by the Collector; and only 131 suits were brought to contest them. In the Rajshahye Division the corresponding numbers are 41,200 orders and 90 suits. In the Presidency Division, 52,250 orders resulted in the institution of 73 suits. If these figures are any indication of the extent to which claims regarding the registration of tenures are likely to be disputed, they may perhaps tend to reassure those who apprehend that almost every claim will lead to a suit.

* Paper No. 4.

7. We now proceed to indicate the principles upon which, in our own opinion, a Bill for the registration of permanent tenures should be framed; and we shall then explain the alterations which we have made in the Bill with the object of bringing it into conformity with those principles.

8. The main purpose of the Bill is to give increased facilities to the zemindars for the realization of their rents. As Mr. Mohini Mohun Roy has remarked in his pamphlet, it does not pay a landlord to sue a ryot, but it does pay him to sue a tenure-holder. When a tenure-holder is sued, the suit is generally undefended, and the landlord has no difficulty in obtaining a decree: his troubles begin when he attempts to take out execution. But there is one class of tenures the rents of which are, for the most part, regularly and punctually paid. These are the putni talooks, and other similar tenures, which are liable to summary sale under Regulation VIII of 1819. It would be an enormous boon to the zemindars if the rents of all permanent tenures could be made realizable under a similar procedure. But we do not think that this should be done, unless the tenures are first registered in a public office.

9. The compilation of such a register will be a work of great labour and magnitude; and we therefore think it desirable, not only that the class of tenures to be registered should be accurately defined, but that the Act should not be brought into force at once throughout the country, but should be gradually introduced into those districts in which satisfactory arrangements can be made for working it. We consider that optional registration should be tried in the first instance, but that power should be reserved to the Government to make registration compulsory.

10. Where registration is optional, the proceedings for bringing a tenure upon the register should be conducted entirely before the Civil Court, and the fullest opportunity should be given to all persons to prefer objections or to put forward claims. When all disputed matters have been settled, the Court should pass its order regarding the registration of the tenure, and should communicate such order to the Collector, by whom the register will be kept. But when a tenure has once been placed on the register, all transferees or successors should be compelled to register their names. Under the provisions of the Tenancy Act, they are required to give notice to the landlord; but we think they should also give notice to the Collector, and in the same way they should give notice if any change occurs in the conditions under which the tenure is held. Unless this is done it is clear that the Collector's register will very soon become obsolete. When such an application, either for a mere change of names, or for a change in the recorded conditions of the tenure, is made to the Collector, the landlord may take one of three courses: he may concur in the change being made, or he may object, or he may neither concur nor object. If he concurs, we would allow the Collector to make the change: if he does not object, we would allow the Collector to make any change which involves nothing more than a mutation of names; but if the landlord objects, or if the application involves any change in the conditions of the tenure, we think the matter should be decided by the Civil Court.

11. Where registration is compulsory, we do not think it would be reasonable to compel parties to go to the Civil Court unless they desire to do so. We would therefore allow applications for registration to be made to the Collector, and we would permit him to register the tenure in cases in which there is no dispute. But we would not give the Collector power to determine any disputed question except that of possession, nor even to

[illegible] if either party should wish to have the case referred to

12. Applications for registration, whether made to the Collector or to the Courts, will require only an eight-anna stamp. But if it is necessary to frame issues, and to try the matters in dispute as in a regular suit, we think that a court-fee should be levied as in a suit for the possession of the tenure. In cases where registration is optional, this can easily be done, but in cases of compulsory registration it will be necessary to provide that the value of the stamps may be levied as a fine.

13. These being the general principles of the scheme, we have made the following alterations in the draft of the Bill as introduced into Council.

14. In section 1* (1) we have provided that the Local Government may apply the Act to any district or sub-division, and may declare that its application shall be optional or compulsory.

* The figures of sections refer to the Bill as now revised. Figures within brackets refer to the sections of the former draft.

15. In section 2 (2) we have omitted the definitions of "holding," "local area," and "Subordinate Judge" as unnecessary. We have introduced a definition of "rent," which seems to be required. We have made the meaning of "tenure" more clear, by showing that we use the word "ryot" in the sense in which it is used in the Tenancy Act. We have expressly excluded the interest of a ryot holding at a fixed rent or rate from the definition of "permanent tenure." We have altered the definition of "transfer" so as to exclude mortgages. A mortgagee will still be entitled to apply, if he thinks fit, for the registration of his name as mortgagee, but he will not be compelled to apply as a transferee.

16. After the preliminary sections we have divided the rest of the Bill into two chapters, of which the former deals with optional, and the latter with compulsory, registration. But as the optional chapter contains the entire procedure in the Civil Court, some provisions which relate to compulsory registration also find place in it.

17. In section 6 (5) we have substituted "a Court of jurisdiction competent to try a suit for the possession of such tenure" for the "Court of the Subordinate Judge." There seems no sufficient ground for confining these registration cases to a special tribunal.

18. In section 7 (6) we have shortened and simplified the particulars to be given in the application, and have declared that they shall be specified only "so far as may be practicable."

19. Section 8 (45) was formerly part of the compulsory chapter of the Bill, and though we have now transferred it to the optional chapter, we have done so rather with the object of calling attention to the point than as a final expression of our opinion. On the one hand, it may be said that the procedure is not really optional, if a fractional shareholder can force all his co-sharers into Court. On the other hand, it may be argued that it is desirable to encourage registration, and that a fractional shareholder ought not to have the right to prevent all his co-sharers from getting their tenure registered. Perhaps the fairest arrangement would be a compromise, by which the present section 8 would be relegated to the compulsory chapter, and a provision would be inserted in the optional chapter allowing shareholders who represented more than half the entire interest to apply for the registration of a tenure.

20. In section 13 (12) we have made fuller provision for the publication of the notice.

21. In section 16 we have provided that the Court, if it thinks fit, may proceed ex parte. The Bill, as previously worded [sections (11) and (13)] implied that the Court was to insist upon a return being filed by the opposite party, and upon the attendance of all the parties concerned, either in person or by agent. We think it sufficient to provide that all parties shall have an opportunity of filing such statements as they wish, and of being present at the hearing if they desire to attend.

22. Section 19 (16) introduces an important change. Strong objections have been expressed to any limitation of the right of appeal, and in particular to a limitation depending upon the annual rent of the tenure. Upon consideration, we are disposed to think that these cases should be governed by the ordinary law of appeal.

23. Sections 20 to 23 contain the provisions regarding stamps, to which we have referred in paragraph 12 of this report. These sections are not in the original draft of the Bill, but they appear to us to be required.

24. In section 25 (20) we have thought it better to substitute the words "local division" for the word "pergunnah." This brings the wording of the Bill into conformity with the language of the Land Registration Act. We have also made some minor changes in the following section which specifies the particulars to be entered in the register, and we have omitted the old section (23), which provided for the maintenance of a register of leases and counterparts.

25. We have transferred section 30 (42) from the compulsory to the optional chapter of the Bill, as we are of opinion that when a tenure has once been registered it should be incumbent upon the tenure-holder to apply to have the register corrected, whenever such correction is necessary, either by transfer or succession, or by a change in the condition of the tenure.

26. Sections 31 to 38 explain the procedure by which it is proposed that changes should be made in the entries regarding a tenure which has been admitted to registration. As we have already stated in paragraph 10 of this report, we have provided for cases in which the landlord agrees to the change, in which he objects to the change, and in which [illegible] We do not allow him to make any objections which a permanent tenure. But if he objects upon permissible grounds, or if he tenders a statement in a case in which anything more than a mutation of names is applied for, the Bill provides that the case shall be referred to the Civil Court.

27. Section 40 (59) allows the Collector to delegate any of his powers to a Assistant, a Deputy, or a Sub-Deputy Collector. We have transferred this sectio from the compulsory to the optional chapter, and have confined it to the chapter. But even with this limitation we feel some doubt whether these powers shoul be entrusted to a Sub-Deputy Collector. We have allowed the section to stand, as i simply reproduces the provisions of the Land Registration Act of 1876, but we desire t call attention to the point.

28. Section 49, which does not appear in the former draft of the Bill, declares tha all permanent tenures registered under the Act shall be liable to summary sale. The inser tion of this section is necessary in consequence of the omission from the Tenancy Act c the section which stood as section 209 of the Bengal Tenancy Bill of 1884.

29. The chapter relating to compulsory registration comprises only eight section In the former draft the entire procedure of the Land Registration Act was reproduced in thi chapter. By the Bill as now revised it is provided that applications shall be made to th Collector, but that disputed matters shall be referred to the Court, unless the dispute i merely regarding possession; and that even a dispute regarding possession must be referre to the Court if either party applies for such a reference to be made.

30. The Bill has been so materially altered that we think it should be republished and an expression of public opinion upon it invited, before any further attempt is mad to consider it in Council. When sufficient time has been given for the receipt of thes expressions of opinion, we think it would be advisable that we should be authorized to mee again and to submit a final report.

The 27th March 1886.

* I REGRET I am not able to agree with my honourable colleagues in the conclusions t which they have come in this report.

I am clearly of opinion that the Bill should not be proceeded with. It proposes to effec a public and official registration of titles with regard to all permanent tenures in the country with the object of giving the landlords facility for the collection of rents. Now in the firs place, although the Select Committee have tried their best to define a "tenure" and conse quently a "permanent tenure," I must say, with due deference, that the definition given in th amended Bill will not materially mend matters. The definition is a negative one, and base upon the definition of a "ryot" and an "under-ryot" as contained in the Bengal Tenanc Act. When we turn to the latter Act, we find the distinction between a "tenure" and "ryoti holding" is made to hinge upon conditions which are extremely complex and difficul of ascertainment see section 5 of the Act). I may observe that in Behar there is no verna cular word which sufficiently conveys the meaning of the generic word "tenure."

When the essential condition of a definition depends upon the intention of the lessee t collect rents or to cultivate himself, it must be admitted that the distinction between holding and a tenure will be so narrow as to give rise to a good deal of dispute and conten tion.

Passing over this initial difficulty, and taking for granted that no confusion will surroun the conception of permanent tenures, still there can be no doubt that the Bill will lead t enormous litigation. The majority of the Select Committee treat this idea as a misapprehen sion, and they draw an analogy from the statistics of the Land Registration Act. I am afrai that the analogy does not hold good. Under the Land Registration Act of 1876 there was n dispute as to the nature of the interest of zemindars. They or their ancestors or thei vendors held under the Government on the basis of the permanent settlement, the terms o which were enunciated by the statute law of the land. The Act related to the succession and transfers of the zemindari title. These successions and transfers stood, for the most part, registered under section 21, Regulation VIII of 1800. Many of the transfers had been effected by registered deeds or the operation of execution sales, while in the case of succession the fac was evidenced by the grant of letters of administration by Courts of Justice.

It is far otherwise with regard to tenures. Their character and incidents do not rest on the same foundation as zemindaries. It is true that putnis, durputnis, mukararis and the like are created by registered deeds, but evidently they will not create any administrative difficulty if the Bill becomes law. The difficulty has to be looked for in the case of tenures which occupy the border land, as it were, between large holdings and well-recognised permanent tenures. Mr. Dutt, the Collector of Backergunge, estimates the number of tenures in his district at the enormous figure of five hundred thousand, and he holds that their registration will probably occupy a period of forty years. The majority of the Select Committee admit in the ninth paragraph of their report that the compilation of a register of permanent tenures will be a work of great labour and magnitude, and they recommend that the system inaugurated under the Bill, if it is passed into law, should be only gradually introduced, but the gradual introduction of the measure tantamounts, in the light of facts disclosed in one district alone, to the indefinite postponement of its development. Indeed the period at which the landholding community may reasonably expect to reap the benefits the Bill proposes to confer, is so remote that they must leave such benefits out of their calculation.

Besides, however, the question of delay, the Bill will entail upon the population of these Provinces a fearful amount of litigation. Now in cases, where the landlord and the tenant differ as to the nature and conditions of the tenure, the application to register will be treated as a suit for possession of the land, and be subject to the payment of proportionate court fee. This will amount in round numbers to about seven per cent. on the valuation of the property; adding to this item, pleaders' fees, say at four per cent. all round, and the incidental expenses at four or five per cent. more; doubling the sum total of these items for the original court, and the tribunal of appeal, we have something like thirty per cent. on the valuation of tenures as the probable outlay which applicants for registration will have to incur to secure the benefits conferred by the Bill.

The question then arises are not the so-called benefits of the Bill to be rather dearly purchased? We must remember that the question of boundaries and areas of tenures will still remain open questions after the registration proposed by the Bill is effected; and these matters will have to be fought for whenever there will be a cadastral survey or a record of rights. The expenses incidental to these will have to be paid over again.

And after all if the registration of permanent tenures be completed after this vast delay and ruinous expense, what will be the gain to the landlord? What advantages will he derive which will improve his position with regard to the collection of rent? As the law now stands, he can execute his decree for arrears of rent and bring a tenure to sale within thirty days; he runs no risk of being sued for damages; and he can realize from the surplus sale proceeds arrears which accrue after the date of his decree; he can also recover damages up to 25 per cent. if the tenant has wilfuly neglected to pay. All these advantages he enjoys, and I do not think he will be able to add to them substantially by having the privilege of suing his tenant summarily: on the other hand the slightest irregularity will vitiate the summary sale, and he will have to enter into a prolonged and costly litigation with the defaulter, and if the sale is set aside, to indemnify the purchaser. There seems to prevail an erroneous impression as to the optional system of registration. The option is given to both the landlord and tenant and any shareholder; either of these may drag the others into court, so that virtually the system will not have the element of option in it.

The remarks I have made above apply to the system of optional registration. Under the compulsory system, the zemindar and the tenureholder will both fare worse, as in addition to all the evils pointed out above, the Collector will be able to invoke the aid of the procedure for the recovery of public demands to realize the court-fees due to Government, should the same not be paid.

I shall only add that section 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act provides a remedy more complete and less expensive than that proposed by the Bill, and I venture to say that after that Act has been in operation for some years, the status of tenure-holders will be determined in a quiet way.

To my mind it is well that we should pause, and seriously reflect whether in our anxiety to confer upon the people a supposed legislative good, we may not unconsciously inflict upon them evils which will plunge them into a sea of litigation and render their lot far more miserable than it is at present. The country is already suffering from the development of a litigious tendency which did not exist before to such an extent as now.

To sum up, then, I maintain that the Bill will not confer upon either landlord or tenure-holders benefits in proportion to the cost, annoyance, waste of time, and energy which it will entail upon both classes of the community; that it will not satisfy the just demands of the former; that all Landholders' Associations disapprove of the measure; and that it will impose a great labour upon the already overwhelmed judicial and executive staff of officers.

JAI PROKASH LALL.

STEAM BOILERS AND PRIME-MOVERS.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Bengal Act III of 1879 (Steam Boilers and Prime Movers).

AMENDMENT OF THE VILLAGE CHAUKIDARI ACT.

The HON. MR. GARRETT moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to village watchmen be taken into consideration in order to the settlement of the clauses of the Bill.

The HON. RAI JAI PROKASH LALL BAHADOOR moved as an amendment that the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be published in the local vernacular gazettes for the information of the public. He said that, considering the fact that the Bill vitally affected the entire rural population of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, a vast majority of whom did not know English, or even know of the existence of the Calcutta Gazette, it was absolutely necessary in the interests of the public that the provisions of the amended Bill should be presented to them in their own language. The changes made by the Select Committee in the original Bill were sweeping and radical: in fact, the amended Bill was a wholly different measure from its predecessor, and it was but right that the people should know exactly the shape in which it now stood. They had, moreover, been under the impression that all the objectionable features of the original Bill had been removed; but although all felt deeply thankful to the Select Committee and the Government for the concessions so graciously made, he regretted that the amended Bill, if passed into law, would introduce a change which would really transfer the control of the village watch from the people to the executive administration. The hon'ble members were aware that, under the system to be inaugurated by the Bill, the pay of the chaukidars would be disbursed by such officers as the Magistrate might appoint on that behalf, i.e., in all probability the officers of the police department. Therefore, the regular police, as the department which would pay the salaries of the chaukidars, would be able to exercise over them an absolute control. It was all very well to say that the chaukidar would be under the supervision of the punchayet, but to all intents and purposes the real power would gravitate towards the Inspector and his Sub, and by a natural law would descend to the head constable and the constable. The procedure which the Bill substitute regarding the payment of chowkidars' salaries was, as he should show when he move another amendment that stood in his name, wholly unworkable; and the tendency of the change would render the duties of the punchayet more distasteful to them than they were before, and the whole result would he was sure, leave matters far worse than they had been. It was only proper that before a change so radical in its character was introduced—a change which, as it were, would revolutionize the present practice—the people should have an opportunity of expressing their opinions upon it. It might be said that if his motion was accepted by the Council, the Bill might not be passed this session. But a delay of eight or nine months was wholly immaterial: they were not confronted with a political difficulty or a social crisis; and if the Government should be pleased to agree to a postponement of the discussion of the Bill, no interest would suffer in the slightest degree.

The HON. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE in supporting the motion said he would be glad if the Council could see its way to accepting the proposal which had just been made; but he would wish also to avail himself of the opportunity to refer to some of the principal features of the Bill as it had now come before the Council for consideration. He entirely agreed with his hon friend as to the extent and scope of the amendments made by the Select Committee, and also as to the objectionable character of its one proposal to make over the payment of chaukidars to officers appointed by the Magistrate. But before entering into that matter, it was his agreeable duty to bear testimony to the very important modifications in the direction of concession to public opinion which had been introduced in the Bill as it was originally laid before the Council in the course of the sittings of that Committee. When the Bill was introduced on the 30th January last, he ventured to object to six principal features in the Bill as it then stood. He ventured to object to the compulsory appointment the appointment of chaukidars from the punchayets to the Magistrates; to the proposed increase of the powers of the District Superintendent of Police and of the district police generally over village watchmen; to the payment of the chaukidars at the thana; and lastly, to the proposed increase of taxation which was a necessary consequence of some of those proposals. He was happy to be able to say that, with one exception, every one of those grounds of objection had been fully and freely met by the Select Committee; and further that the Select Committee had directed its attention not simply to the removal of those evils and the withdrawal of the proposed innovations of an objectionable character, but it also directed its attention to the examination of the existing Act, and to improving and strengthening the basis of the punchayet system in these territories. Perhaps the most important change in the existing Act which the Select Committee proposed to make in the Bill now before the Council was that in section 3 of Act VI of 1870 He could have wished that the recognition of the elective principle in the constitution of punchayets had been fully, and (if he might use the word) more formally made than happened to be the case in the wording of the section. But it was his duty to admit that, practically and substantially, at least in the vast majority of cases, the principle of election had been recognised by the Committee and embodied in this new section. Section 2 of the Bill laid down, in the first place, that it would be the duty of an officer exercising magisterial powers to proceed personally to the village and thereby remove the greatest blot that existed in the working of the present system by reason of the employment of the police for the selection of punchayets. But the section as proposed went further and provided that, except in certain special cases, the appointment was to be made in conformity with the wishes of the villagers themselves. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE understood the section to mean that in the vast majority of cases the selection made by the villagers would be approved. It was only when special reasons existed, and these would have to be specially recorded when they did exist, that the nominees of the villagers would be set aside.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT observed that there was an amendment in the notice paper on section 3. It would be very much better that the discussion of the question involved in that amendment should be deferred till the amendment came before the Council. They would never get to the end of the Bill if details, which were subject to consideration at a later stage of the proceedings, were discussed generally now.

The HON. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE said that he would reserve the further remarks which he had to offer until the time came for him to move the amendments of which he had given notice.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he must oppose the amendment moved by the Hon Rai Jai Prokash Lall Bahadoor for the republication of the Bill in the vernacular gazettes. The papers connected with this Bill had been for a long time before the public. It had been admitted by both the hon. members who had spoken that the Bill as it was introduced had been considerably modified, and that the amendments which had been made were all in the direction which those who opposed the original Bill desired. The report of the Select Committee had been for a fortnight on the table of the Council, and had been published in all the newspapers; and if the Bill in its amended form were now to be published and circulated throughout the country, they would never get to legislation at all. His Honor had no intention to pass the Bill into law at the present meeting of the Council. That ultimate motion he proposed to defer till the last meeting of the Council on the 10th April next; therefore another fortnight must elapse before any final action could be taken. He therefore felt it his duty to oppose the motion, especially as the hon. mover of the amendment was present when His Honor announced that the Bill would be taken into consideration on this occasion.

The HON. RAI JOY PROKASH LALL BAHADOOR said that he was willing to

The amendment was then put and negatived, and the original motion was agreed to.

The HON. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE moved that, in the second line of the last clause of section 2, for the words "this Act" the words "the Village Chaukidari Act" (or, if preferred, the words "Bengal Act VI of 1870 as amended by Bengal Act I of 1871") be substituted. This, he said, was a mere question of drafting, and he would leave the matter entirely in the hands of the hon. mover with the observations he was about to make. The clause said—"Provided also that in every village to which this Act has already been extended." The only doubt he felt was that the words "this Act" would be held to refer to this Bill when it passed into an Act. If, for instance, it became Act II of 1886, the language would refer to the extension of that Act, and not to Act VI of 1870; but that he believed was not intended by the Select Committee. The meaning was that after the passing of this Bill, in places to which the existing Village Chaukidari Acts, VI of 1870 and I of 1871, had been extended, a fresh appointment or election of the punchayet should, as soon as possible, be made, so that the new system might be brought into working order without delay; and that interpretation was further confirmed by the first section of the Bill, which provided that "this Act shall be read with, and taken as part of, Bengal Act VI of 1870 as amended by Bengal Act I of 1871," which showed that the expression "this Act" referred to this Bill when passed into law. Therefore, it seemed to him as a matter of drafting that the better course would be to provide that "in every village to which the Village Chaukidari Act (or Bengal Act VI of 1870 as amended by Bengal Act I of 1871) has already been extended," so that there might be no ambiguity as to the meaning.

The HON. MR. GARRETT said he could not accept the amendment. He thought that if the hon. member looked at section 2 of the Bill he would find that that section was to be substituted for section 3 of Act VI of 1870, and to form a part of that Act; therefore the words "this Act" in that section could only refer to the Act of which it formed a part.

The HON. THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said he agreed in the construction put by the hon. mover of the Bill upon the words "this Act" in the last clause of section 2 of the Bill.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The HON. RAI JAI PROKASH LALL BAHADOOR moved the insertion of the following after the second proviso in section 3:—

"Provided also that, after the Magistrate has so sanctioned the names of such persons he shall, within a reasonable time, publish a list thereof in the village; and that no person's name shall be retained in such list to whose nomination one-third of the rate-payers of the said village shall, within thirty days after such publication, prefer objections in writing."

His object in moving this amendment was clear enough. The Magistrate, under the present system, which was maintained in the revised Bill, had to consult the wishes of the people before he appointed a punchayet. The alteration he proposed would accentuate the need for his acting in consonance with the sentiments of the local public. He would have to publish his list of nominees to the village, and within a specified time objections were to be preferred by the villagers. If the people came forward and declared their opposition to the choice of any particular person, he ought not to be shouldered upon the village community. He ventured to say that the condition inserted in the amendment, that the adverse votes must represent fully one-third of the rate-payers of the village, was a sufficient guarantee that business would not be needlessly obstructed. The people were desirous of electing their [illegible] that there might be some difficulty i of instances, continue to make the payments; if the Magistrate was satisfied that they had negligently and wilfully failed to pay, he might displace them.

He felt confident that this amendment would be accepted. They should not brand a whole population of millions of villages as incompetent to manage such a small matter as the payment of their own watch. The people were far more interested in seeing that he guarded their lives and properties than all the regular police force put together; for when a theft or robbery took place, it was the people who suffered and not the Inspector or the Sub-Inspector.

The punchayet incurred the odium of assessing the tax and of collecting it; the liability of having their goods and chattels distrained and sold was imposed upon them: they were dragged before the Criminal Court for neglecting to give information of offences, and still they were not to be trusted any longer. If there were any means completely to estrange the sympathies of the people from the village watch, the provision of the Bill which he humbly sought to amend would completely bring about such ends.

The Hon. Moulvie Abdul Jubbar observed that if the hon. member consulted the wishes of the chaukidars themselves he would find that they would prefer to be paid by an officer of Government than to receive their salaries from the members of the punchayet. He thought that, in a matter like this, there was considerable advantage in taking into consideration the wishes of the payees.

The Hon. Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose said he had not had the advantage of consulting the chaukidars as to how they would like to be paid. They were, he apprehended, rather a large body for any single member to consult; but he had caused inquiries to be made, and from the information accessible to him, it certainly seemed that the chaukidars were not very fond of the members of the police force with whom they had to come into contact. He would beg therefore to support this amendment, and he supported it, first on the ground that the Bill proposed to effect a radical change in the relations which had hitherto been subsisting between the chaukidars and the members of the punchayet. He thought the Bill would loosen that bond of sympathy which existed between the chaukidar and the village community, and the punchayet representing the village community, if the power of payment of the chaukidar's wages were taken away from the punchayet and the chaukidar had to look to the Magistrate or officer appointed by the Magistrate for his pay. He was free to admit that the report of Mr. Monro's Committee had brought it out that there had been exceptional cases of irregularity in the payment of the chaukidar on the part of the punchayets; but he would beg to draw the attention of the Council to this one great fact,—that the Council was practically proceeding on the basis that the defects which had been found to exist in the working of the punchayet system might fairly or reasonably be traced to the other admitted fact that the constitution of the punchayet had not been framed in strict accordance with the intention of the Legislature; and it was on that ground that the Select Committee came to the decision to give a further trial to the present system, and to strengthen, in a material way, the constitution of the punchayet in the manner proposed in section 3 of the Bill. He therefore submitted that it would be desirable to give a further trial to the present system without introducing this very material innovation, and to see how the punchayet, as it was now proposed to be constituted, gave satisfaction by a proper discharge of their duties. Then he begged to point out the inconveniences which would result from the adoption of the course suggested by this section of the Bill. In such case the collections made by the punchayet would have to make a double journey—first a journey to the Magistrate or officer whom the Magistrate might appoint to pay the chaukidars, and then the journey back into the hands of the chaukidar. No doubt there were great advantages in travelling, but in this case he did not think there would be any profit, but on the contrary inconvenience and loss would result from the process. He next submitted that it was not desirable to cast a slur on the whole body of punchayets by depriving them of the power of [illegible] account of irregularities on the part of some of them, on a new basis, and that the proper safeguard against non-payment would be furnished by the next amendment of the hon. member (Rai Jai Prokash Lall Bahadoor). What was proposed was this: that when there was a complaint of non-payment by a punchayet, it would then be open to the Magistrate to appoint an officer to pay the chaukidar. But in the absence of complaints of that description it would not be necessary, nor he submitted would it be desirable, that the wholesale change contemplated by section 11 should be introduced. And lastly, he would also mention this for consideration, that if the apprehension was justified that the officer appointed would be a member of the police force—and he supposed that in many cases it might be so—the evils that would be brought into existence would also be of a serious description. He would not enter into that question now, because there was a further amendment on the notice paper which would enable him to address himself to that general point; but having regard to the class of police officers in charge of outposts, in many cases in remedying the present evil the Council would perhaps be introducing evils of a worse description. On these grounds he hoped the Council would accept the amendment, and all the more so when it was remembered that it was to be read in conjunction with the next amendment, which provided that on complaint of the non-receipt by the chaukidar of his salary for a quarter the Magistrate might take action.

The Hon. Mr. Garrett entirely opposed the amendment, because it would defeat one of the main objects of the Bill, viz. to secure the punctual payment of the chaukidar, by bringing it in some degree under the hands of the Magistrate. Experience had shown not only that the chaukidars would not complain, but they were forced to admit that they had been paid when they had not been paid. An hon. member mentioned in Committee a case in which certain chaukidars had been compelled to refund the arrears of pay which the evening before the punchayet had been compelled to pay them. And as regards the question of inconvenience, Mr. Garrett remarked that the word "Magistrate" included a sub-divisional Magistrate as well as a District Magistrate, and there would therefore be little or no inconvenience. Moreover, money might be remitted by means of money-orders in the same way as rent might now be remitted. He thought that to leave the payment of the chaukidars in the hands of the collecting member of the punchayet would be to perpetuate one of the most well-proved evils of the present system.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds observed that if the next amendment on the notice paper was accepted, to which he saw no objection, there would be nothing in section 11 as it stood to prevent the Magistrate directing that the pay of the chaukidar should be given to him by the collecting member of the punchayet. He quite agreed with the hon. mover of the Bill that the section was of extreme importance, and that the amendment now before the Council would defeat one of the main objects of the Bill. He therefore opposed the acceptance of this amendment.

The Hon. Rai Jai Prokash Lall Bahadoor said that the remarks which he had made applied not only to the amendment now before the Council, but to his proposed amendment on section 12, which related to the same subject-matter, and he had nothing further to add.

His Honor the President said that the Act as it originally stood, section 43, provided that every chaukidar should receive, month by month, the full amount of his salary from the members of the punchayets appointed to collect the tax. The amending section of this Bill simply said that every chaukidar should receive, quarter by quarter, (following the law as amended by Act I of 1871), the full amount of his salary from such officer as the Magistrate should appoint. The objection taken to this amendment of the law was that it superseded the punchayet. His Honor could not help agreeing with the [illegible] provided some such words were introduced as was prevent the Magistrate from being misled by designing men in his selection of the punchayet.

The Hon. Mr. Garrett said he could not accept the amendment. It appeared to him that the section as it stood provided that a magisterial officer should go to the village and ascertain the wishes of the villagers as to the persons to be selected for the punchayet. The Government was not prepared to concede a regular system of election; but they desired that the opinions of the villagers should be placed before the officer who was to select the members of the punchayet, that the villagers should in an informal way express their opinion as to who were the fittest persons to be appointed. It seemed to Mr. Garrett that the hon'ble member's amendment would make it possible for one-third of the villagers to keep any person out of the punchayet—make it in fact a sort of club in which one black ball in three would exclude. The selecting officer would in most cases be a native gentleman who would be fully qualified to judge of the validity of any objections which might be raised to any person who had been chosen for appointment to the punchayet.

The Hon. Moulvie Abdul Jubbar remarked that experience in the working of the Act showed that if the amendment were carried there would be considerable difficulty in appointing a punchayet; for it would be very easy for an unwilling raiyat or the principal person in the village to induce one-third of the villagers to object to any appointment.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds thought the amendment would cause great inconvenience. Besides, the exclusion of any person on the objection of one-third of the rate-payers assumed that the Magistrate would have in his possession a list of the rate-payers, and that he would be able to see whether one-third of them had objected. Mr. Reynolds therefore opposed the amendment.

The Hon. Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose said that the acceptance of the amendment would defeat the very object which the hon. mover had in view. As the section was worded, the procedure was this:—A person exercising magisterial functions went to the village, and the people to be appointed as punchayet were to be the persons who in the opinion of the villagers were considered to be the fittest, or, for special reasons to be recorded, other persons might be appointed. Practically in nine cases out of ten the election by the villagers would be accepted by the Magistrate, for he could not conceive that special disqualifying causes to their selection would be found to exist in anything like an appreciable number of cases. But under this amendment, after such selection and appointment had been made, there was to be a publication in the village, and the opposition of one-third of the villagers would defeat the selection made by two-thirds of them; and the effect of that would be really to defeat the introduction of the elective principle, and not to promote its acceptance. Not only would this be the case, but the whole elective system would be brought to a dead lock, and there would be a fiasco; for nothing was provided in the amendment to meet the contingency which might happen on one-third of the rate-payers objecting to the selection by the majority. Was a Deputy Magistrate to go again to the village, with a similar result following ad infinitum, and a minority successfully and permanently overriding the wishes of the majority? Under these circumstances, he hoped his hon. friend would see that, while every one was prepared fully to sympathise with the object he had in view, it would be frustrated and not furthered by the amendment. Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose would have wished that the recognition of the elective principle had been more formal and complete; but he did not think that result would be obtained by accepting this amendment.

The Hon. Rai Jai Prokash Lall Bahadoor said in reply that he admitted that under the provisions of this Bill a better class of men would be obtained for [illegible] but the Magistrate could only consult a number of selected [illegible] usually happened that designing men stepped in and tried to get their own set appointed, and sometimes very obnoxious persons were nominated to the punchayet. His object was only to provide some safeguard to prevent the appointment of such men, which would be a great advantage.

The motion was then put and negatived.

The HON. RAI JAI PROKASH LALL BAHADOOR moved that in section 11 for the words "such officer as the Magistrate shall appoint," the following words be substituted: "the member of the punchayet appointed to collect the tax" In support of his amendment the hon. member said:—The Council was fully aware of the great difficulties which the Magistrate found in inducing respectable people to accept seats on the board of punchayets. These difficulties arose from the fact that the members of the punchayet were treated with but scant courtesy by the regular police. Almost on every occasion when the Inspector visited a village, a punch was treated a little better, of course, than the chaukidar, but still in a way to which no man who had the smallest spark of self-respect would submit. The punchayet had also to dance attendance on the Magistrate and Deputy Magistrate, and District and Assistant Superintendents of Police, wherever they might choose to encamp while on tour. But although a seat on the village board was now no bed of roses, still a punchayet had some real power over the chaukidar, inasmuch as his wages were paid by them. He desired that this power should still be theirs, and that, only in exceptional cases, where the Magistrate was satisfied that there had been wilful and negligent failure to pay the chaukidar's salary, the Magistrate would be able to substitute an official agency in place of the indigenous agency. He earnestly submitted that the system proposed by the Bill could not work at all satisfactorily. In the first place, the punchayets of all the villages of a district, in many cases situated at enormous distances from the sudder station, were to remit their collections to the Magistrate. How would this money be remitted? Who would pay the expenses which the process would involve? Were the collections to be remitted daily, or weekly, or monthly? Would the money have to be deposited in the thana or treasury, or kept with a ministerial officer? If the latter, how would his duties be remunerated? How and by whom were the accounts to be kept; whether by the same officers who had the custody of the money or by a different set of men? Who, again, would be the officer appointed by the Magistrate to pay the chaukidars' salaries? If the Inspector or Sub-Inspector or Head Constable in charge of a police station or outpost be appointed, were they quite sure that the lot of the chaukidar would be improved? Considering the present staff of subordinate police officers, it was extremely doubtful whether the three rupees per month would not grow beautifully less and less by change of hands to two rupees, or two rupees and eight annas.

The ostensible ground assigned for depriving the people of the control of their own police is that chaukidars had not been punctually paid by the punchayets. Now he ventured to say that that ground could not be supported. Mr. Westmacott in his minute said:—

"From my own experience, I have generally considered that, so long as the villagers can find a chaukidar who will come regularly to the thana, I may leave it to them to take care that he performs watch and ward to their satisfaction, and to the chaukidar himself to secure proper pay and that I need not interfere unless the choukidar complains of not being properly paid." * * * * * * *

"Considering how natives dislike punctuality in making payments, I think the success of the punchayets in collecting the rate has been very fair. One Magistrate reporting on the subject points out that the punchayets have collected the chaukidari tax much more punctually than rents are collected in zemindar's estate or in khas mehals, and this I corroborate both from my own experience as Magistrate and also from the enquiries of the Committee."

So that it was abundantly clear that the very reason which had been assigned for the transfer of the power of making payments of the watchmen's salary of the punchayet to perform this duty. His Honor was very glad to hear from the hon member that there had been great concessions made since this Bill was first introduced. It was framed on the recommendation of the Committee, the majority of whom at least considered that a completely different system should be introduced on account of the failure of the Act which was passed fifteen years ago. The point which they brought out chiefly was that the punchayets did not do their duty, and that the chowkidars were not regularly paid. The Committee were of opinion that, in this matter, the punchayets should not be trusted further, but the argument which the Hon. Mr Anundo Mohun Bose based upon that was that, as the constitution of the punchayets would be greatly improved under this Bill, they should be trusted further. The view of the Committee, which was a very efficient one, composed as it was of gentlemen thoroughly conversant with the working of the system, was very strongly opposed to the continuation of the present mode of paying the chaukidars. They said practically that the Act was passed on the principle of trusting the village communities; that in such a small matter, limited to so small an area, viz. a village, and the payment of so small a sum as Rs. 3 or Rs. 4 per mensem to the chaukidar, it had been hoped that the village community would have been able regularly to realize the money in their own way and to pay the chaukidar. The result of their enquiries, however, went to show that in both these respects the Act had failed. The money was not properly realized: it was realised from the poorer class of people, while the rich were entirely exempted, which was very unfair; and the money even when collected was not regularly paid to the chaukidar. They admitted that there had been a great improvement upon the previous state of things when the chaukidars were paid by the zemindars, but they said that the Act of 1870 had nothing to do with the improvement which had taken place. The system introduced by that Act was intended to be self-acting, and very much was left to the spontaneous action of the punchayets and the village communities The result, however, was that any improvement which had taken place had been effected by measures entirely outside the Act. He would read to the Council a few lines in which the Committee brought that out. They said—

"Up to the year 1878 the village communities were allowed to work the Act very much in their own way, and special attention does not seem to have been directed to the question of the regularity of payment of salaries of chaukidars. In that year, however, doubts began to be expressed as to whether the payment of chaukidars' wages was so regular as believed, and in 1879 the inspection of punchayets' accounts by police officers was specially sanctioned by Government. The inspection of these accounts revealed the fact that instead of the village chaukidar being paid with regularity, the village communities had allowed his wages habitually to fall into arrears. Since then, exceptional activity has been displayed by local officers in insisting on punchayets doing their duty, and in not unfrequent instances punctuality of payment has been secured by the adoption of measures decidedly illegal."

That went to show that the voluntary system was an absolute failure, and that hitherto the only way to secure the regular payment of this important body of public officers was by the exercise of extra legal, or rather illegal, powers to enforce payment. And now the hon. member asked the Council to exclude legislation which would sanction the exercise of such powers. His Honor was very glad to accept, having regard to the expressed views of public officers generally, the proposal of the amended Bill to give a further trial to the punchayet system; but he must insist that it was the duty of the Government to secure by the best means in their power the regular payment of these watchmen, and that could only be done by some principle of external control such as this Bill provided. His Honor would not object to the insertion of the words "or person" after officer, because he thought that, in most cases in which the Magistrate took action under this section, it would be by appointing the headman of the punchayet to perform this duty, and it would be only in exceptional cases, when the village community or the punchayet was obstructive or dilatory, that the Magistrate would have power to depute some person to see that the chaukidar was paid. And therefore he opposed the amendment that the matter should be left as it was at present entirely in the hands of the not necessarily be a police officer, but any person whom the Magistrate thought fit to appoint, such for instance as any member of the village community in whom he had confidence.

The motion was then put to the vote and negatived.

The Hon. Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose moved that in section 11, after the words "such officer," the words "or in such way" be added, and that at the end the following proviso be inserted:—"Provided that, so far as practicable, the payment shall in no case be made through the police." He said that he hoped after the remarks which had fallen from His Honor the President that there would be no difficulty on the part of the Council in accepting this amendment. His reason for proposing the amendment was twofold. First, he thought it very desirable that it should be expressly laid down that the police, as a rule, should not be empowered to disburse payments to the chaukidars. And in order to support that it became necessary for a moment to examine the relations at present subsisting between the police and the village chaukidars. A number of enquiries were instituted on this point, as had been stated in the memorial from the Indian Association, and certainly the result of that enquiry, from more than a hundred villages, was to show that the village chaukidars were in a state of almost unmitigated serfdom to the officer in charge of the police thana. And this was subsequently borne out by the report of the Official Committee. In paragraph 81 of the report of Mr. Monro's Committee, they said—

"At present chaukidars drop into the thana at all hours of the day. The officer in charge asks them if they have anything to say, and they reply in the negative; they dawdle about the thana; the police make use of them to perform various menial services for them, and they go off to their villages without having really given any information of any practical use, only to return next day, or a few days afterwards, to go through the same unmeaning form."

The Council had it therefore on the authority of the Committee that it was an undoubted fact that when the village chaukidars went to the thana, very little use was made of them for the real purpose of their visit to the thana, but practically the use to which their attendance was turned was to make them perform—he need hardly say without remuneration—all kinds of menial service that might be imposed upon them by the officer in charge of the station. The result of the enquiries of the Indian Association went further. Not only at the thana, but on the occasion of the visit to the village itself, the police officer was in a position to exercise all the privileges of a master in making the chaukidar carry loads and the like, in some cases subjecting him to personal ill-treatment: and Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose submitted that, if the payment of the chaukidars were further to be made over to the police, those relations—and they were exceedingly undesirable relations—would be all the more strengthened. Secondly, he submitted that in other respects also it would be undesirable that the police should have this power. He did not wish to make any sweeping observations; but after the startling statements made in the body of the report as to the conduct of the Police, and after the observations which had been made by an hon. member whose services the Council were sorry to lose, though they congratulated him on his elevation to a higher sphere of usefulness, Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose thought the Council would agree with him in coming to the conclusion that, constituted as these subordinate officers of police were in many cases in the mofussil, it was not desirable that they should have the work of disbursing the pay of the chaukidars. And let it be remembered that this would materially add to the work of an over-burdened police which had already enough to do. The words "or in such way" which the amendment proposed to insert would enable the Magistrate to exercise his discretion in an unfettered way, and determine how the payment was to be made. He might make it through the post if he chose, and there were various other agencies which might be utilised, as for instance the Chairman of the Union Committee, or the head-master of the school,

The HON. MR GARRETT said he would have no objection to the first portion of the amendment if the hon. member would be willing to substitute for "or in such way" the words "or person."

The HON. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE explained that his object in proposing to introduce the words "or in such way" was to make it more comprehensive so as to include, for instance, payment through the agency of the post.

The HON. MR. GARRETT thought the payment should be made by some particular person who could be held responsible. A village chaukidar could not read or write, and he might say that his receipt was forged.

The HON. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE having acquiesced to the proposed substitution of words—

The HON. MR. GARRETT observed that, as regards the second portion of the amendment, he could not accept it fully. He agreed that payments should not be made by a Head Constable of police for instance, but he thought an officer in the position of Sub-Inspector ought to be trusted.

The HON. THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said he did not think they should assume that all the aspersions which had been made against the police were deserved. They should assume that the police would do their duty, and he apprehended that every Magistrate of intelligence would take care that the payments were made in such a way as to ensure the receipt of the money by the chaukidars. He thought the Magistrate would hardly depute an officer who was supposed not to be an upright man, and that the safeguards proposed in the second portion of the amendment were unnecessary.

The HON. MR. HARRISON considered that a very large and important principle was involved in this amendment. The principle of separating the village police from the control of the district police, and so far as it worked in that direction he submitted it was entirely wrong and contrary to principles recognised in all civilized countries. He was afraid lest the prejudice which existed against the police should lead the Council to accept an altogether wrong principle in this matter. The village chaukidars were, in fact, the rural police on whom the detection and prevention of crime rested: the district police were too few in number, their time was much taken up with serving processes, and they were not in a position to discharge the functions of a detective force. It would be a retrograde measure to pass any section the effect of which would be to make the subordinate police feel that they were not to look up to their superior officers; for that was after all what this proposal meant. The Magistrate must exercise the chief control over the subordinate police through the superior police. The question at issue was very much this: Who was to have control over the local Police? Was it to be in the hands of the Magistrate, and through him of the central authority, or of the chief persons of the village, and through them of the people themselves? The former he believed was the principle accepted in all countries.

Mr. Mill, who would not be likely to err by want of sympathy for the popular side, thus wrote on this very question in his work on Representative Government:—

"Security of person and property and equal justice between individuals are the first needs of society and the primary ends of Government. If these things can be left to any responsibility below the highest, there is nothing except war and treaties which requires a general Government at all. Whatever are the best arrangements for security, these primary objects should be made universally obligatory, and to secure their enforcement should be placed under central superintendence."

It was quite evident what so staunch but enlightened an advocate of popular Government as Mr. Mill thought of a proposal to place the police under popular control, and Mr. Harrison could hardly conceive of anybody who had thought would not allow a Head Constable in charge of an outpost to pay the village police. On a detail of this kind, however, Mr. Harrison would not introduce an element of division into the Council, and he was therefore willing to vote for the Hon. Mr. Garrett's suggestion, but he would certainly contend against putting in any clause which would imply that village chaukidars were not to be taught to look up to the superior officers of the police of the district for orders or for the payment of their wages.

The Hon. Rai Jai Prokash Lall Bahadoor said the real question which was involved in the amendment before the Council was the transfer of the power of control of the village chaukidars from the punchayet to the police. If the pay of the chaukidar passed through the police, there could be no doubt that all that had been stated by the hon. mover of the amendment would come to pass. The members of the punchayet themselves were not well treated by the sub-inspector, head constable and other police officers, and therefore service on the punchayet was unpopular. If any member of the punchayet, or some other respectable person in the village, was appointed to pay the chaukidar, there would be no objection.

The Hon. Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose said he would ask hon. members to consider what was the real object of section 11. He understood that the object was to secure that the salary of the chaukidar should be regularly paid. If that, and that alone, was the object, then he could not understand why there should be any objection to accepting the amendment; but if the object was different—and no doubt the Bill as it was introduced had avowedly another object, viz. to make the village police to a larger extent than now amenable to the influence of the regular police—then he could understand why it should be intended to have the payments made through the police. But if all that was wanted was to see that the chaukidar was paid, there might be any number of means and agencies for doing so without having recourse to the police themselves, and his amendment asserted, as a general direction to the Magistrate, that if he could help it payments should not be made through police officers. If the Magistrate could not find any adequate means of doing so, then there would be nothing to prevent him in such cases only from employing the police as the disbursing agency, and therefore with the addition of the words "so far as practicable" he had thought there would be no objection to the acceptance of the amendment. If payments were made through the police, it would add very materially to the already too great influence which they possessed over village chaukidars; and that he had demonstrated by reference not to facts outside official records, but to the language of the report itself where it described the relations between the police and the chaukidar as being of such a kind that he was made to neglect his proper duties in order to perform menial services for police officers. He hoped the Council would agree with him that that was not a desirable state of things to continue, that those who were guardians of the law should be breakers of the law and oppressors of the weak, and that not casually, but systematically and in the face of day; and he apprehended that the position of the unfortunate chaukidars and their treatment by the police would be a great deal worse when payment was to be made through police agency. He would go further and say that, if it were a choice between the acceptance of this amendment and the suggestion made by the hon. member in charge of the Bill, he was not sure that it would not be better, if his amendment was not accepted, to leave the section as it stood; because by the insertion of the words suggested the idea might be conveyed that, as a matter of course, the police above a certain rank should be employed in paying the chaukidars, and not only in cases where no other agency was available. He had tried in vain to get an answer to the question why it should be laid down or contemplated, unless in case of necessity, that payments should be made through the police at all. He had indicated a variety of means by which such payments could be made; but he would make one observation with regard to the suggestions on the police, that he rested his case entirely on authorities, what guarantee would there be when the sub-inspector had to make the payment. He need not again refer to the question of deductions in payment; but on all the grounds he had urged, he thought that it was very desirable to lay down that, as a rule, payment should be made through agency other than that of the police, though when there was a necessity there should be nothing to prevent payment being made through them.

The question that the words "or person" be inserted after "such officer" in section 11 of the Bill was then put to the vote and agreed to.

The question that the words "provided that, so far as practicable, the payment shall in no case be made through the police" was then put to the vote and declared to be negatived, when a division having been demanded by the hon. mover of the amendment, the following votes were recorded:—

Ayes 3.	Noes 8.
The Hon. Mr. Anundo Mohun Bose.	The Hon. Mr. Cruickshank.
The Hon. Rai Jai Prokash Lall, Bahadoor.	,, ,, Irving.
The Hon. Moulvie Abdul Jubbar.	,, ,, Harrison.
	,, ,, Garrett.
	Col. the Hon. S. T. Trevor.
	The Hon. Mr. Reynolds.
	,, the Advocate-General.
	His Honor the President.

So the motion was negatived.

The Hon. Rai Jai Prokash Lall Bahadoor moved that for the second clause of section 12 the following be substituted:—

"44. Whenever the salary of any quarter shall not be paid in full to any chaukidar on or before the fifteenth of the quarter following, such chaukidar may apply to the Magistrate, who shall call upon the punchayet within ten days to show cause why they should not pay the amount to such chowkidar. If the Magistrate is satisfied that the punchayet has wilfully or negligently failed to pay the salary of the chaukidar, he may appoint an officer on his behalf to make such payment till such time as he may think proper.

"44*a*. When an officer is appointed on behalf of the Magistrate, the punchayet shall, within thirty days after the end of each quarter, remit to such officer the collections made on account of the chaukidari fund of the village."

He had already stated his reasons for this amendment when moving his previous amendment that the punchayet should be allowed to pay the salary of the punchayet. But of course where the Magistrate was dissatisfied, owing to the neglect or failure in making regular payments, he might appoint some officer to do so, and when such officer was appointed the collections would be remitted to him. But when the punchayet discharged their duties satisfactorily, they should be trusted to make the payments.

The Hon. Mr. Garrett said he could not accept this amendment. It was substantially the same as the amendment proposed in section 11. The influence of the punchayet over the chaukidar was so great that the chaukidar would not admit that he had not been paid.

His Honor the President remarked that he felt some hesitation in respect of this section of the Bill as it stood, which provided that the money was to be remitted quarterly to the officer or person appointed by the Magistrate or Sub-Divisional Officer to pay the chaukidars, and that it would then have to be remitted back for payment to the chaukidar.

The Hon. Mr. Garrett explained that objection had been raised to the punchayet being required to remit money to the thana, because it was said that the police annoyed and insulted them. It was therefore proposed that the money should be remitted direct to the Magistrate, who would send it to the thana for payment to the chaukidars.

The Hon. the Advocate-General suggested that the difficulty would be

The HON. RAI JAI PROKASH LALL BAHADOOR's amendment was then put and negatived, and on the motion of the HON. MR. GARRETT for the words "shall remit to the Magistrate or such officer as the Magistrate may appoint in this behalf" the words "shall pay or remit to such officer or person as the Magistrate may appoint under the last foregoing section" were substituted.

The HON. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE moved that in the last line but one of section 12, for the words "the collections made on account of," the following words be substituted:—"A sum equal to the pay of the chaukidar for the quarter, or any smaller amount which may stand to the credit of."

He said that under the law the sum to be collected was the whole amount of the chaukidar's pay, plus 15 per cent., and out of this additional 15 per cent. for charges of collection the punchayet might keep a sum not exceeding—in the existing Act 6 per cent., in the amended Bill 10 per cent. Therefore in cases where the punchayet had succeeded in realizing the whole amount it was only fair that they should be allowed to keep the percentage which the law allowed them in order to enable them to meet their out-of-pocket expenses. Not only was there no reason why the extra amount should be remitted, but on the other hand, if the section stood as at present, it would be inconsistent with the other provision of the law which provided that the punchayets were entitled to a certain percentage to defray the cost of collection. Therefore he hoped the Council would have no difficulty in accepting this amendment.

The HON. MR. GARRETT having accepted the amendment, the motion was put and agreed to.

The HON. MR. ANUNDO MOHUN BOSE moved that, after section 14, the following new section be inserted:—

"After section 47 of the Village Chaukidari Act of 1870, the following shall be inserted:—

"47*a*. When any Union Committee constituted under the provisions of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act, 1885, is willing to undertake the duties of a punchayet in any of the villages included in the Union, it shall be entrusted with the performance of such duties. No punchayet shall thereafter be appointed in such villages, all its powers being vested in the Union Committee; but it shall be lawful for the Union Committee to appoint Village Committees in such villages to help it in the discharge of its duties under the Village Chaukidari Act."

He said he earnestly hoped it might be possible for him to induce the Council to accept this new section. In examining the existing Act two very peculiar features struck him, viz. those embodied in sections 8 and 45. The first was that even if a person was not willing to accept the office of punchayet he would on penalty of a fine be compelled to accept it. No remuneration was given for the performance of the work, to which, moreover, there were very great liabilities attaching. Yet it was laid down that for a period of three years whether he was anxious for the honour or not, the onerous function would be thrust upon him; and further there was this very extraordinary provision in the existing law, slightly altered by the Bill now before the Council, that in case payments had not been made to the chaukidar, the personal belongings of every member of the punchayet would be distrained and sold in order to pay the chaukidar. A parallel provision would be that in case the Government collections were not properly made in any district, the furniture and belongings of the Collector should be sold to make good the deficiency. Such a course had only to be mentioned to expose its absurdity. A Collector might be dismissed if he neglected his duty, but in the case of punchayets, dismissal or resignation was not resorted to, but their goods and chattels were sold. And the argument in favour of this section was this, that though these were very Legislature itself, were found ready and willing to undertake such duties, he thought the justification for this peculiar state of affairs no longer existed. If the Union Committees were willing, the duty should be entrusted to them, and the Legislature should be glad to avail themselves of an opportunity of that kind; and the undesirable features in the present law, to which he had drawn attention, would in the course of time and in a self-acting and extending way cease to exist altogether.

But it was necessary to see that the body which was willing to undertake the duties was a competent body. On that point there could be no room for any hesitation. In sections 37 to 44 of the Local Self-Government Act of last year, the organization of Union Committees was laid down, and he did not think there could be any difficulty in accepting the fact that Union Committees would be much stronger bodies than was ordinarily the case with punchayets. And further, Union Committees were to be formed only in places selected by the Lieutenant-Governor. It was only in advanced portions of the province, and under the safeguard existing in His Honor's selection, that Union Committees were to be established; and further, sections 104 to 119 laid down the duties of such Union Committees. They were to be in charge of all the village roads; they had to build new bridges and extensive powers of construction and supervision were entrusted to them; they were charged with the supervision of primary schools, with the appointment and dismissal of teachers; they might be placed in charge of dispensaries; they would perform the duties of registrars of births and deaths and look after the sanitation of the village. He ought to have stated that a Union Committee might be a committee of one village or of several neighbouring villages, and that a large number of such Committees had already been established; so that here there was a body having extensive powers of executive authority; and as regards the disbursement of funds, they were in fact the local body in charge of public works, education, sanitation, and so forth. Therefore there could be no doubt as to the competence of these bodies to discharge the very simple duties of punchayets; and there was thus, first, the element of a local and competent body; and secondly of that body of its own free will coming forward to accept the duties of village punchayet. It seemed to him therefore that it would really be strengthening the working of the system, and enabling the Legislature to abate gradually some of the necessary evils which at present existed, if the Council would accept a resolution of this kind It would enable a body already recognised to undertake these functions. He did not think he could conclude better than by referring to and quoting the words of His Honor the President in support of the motion he had placed before the Council. In paragraph 3 of the Government Resolution, dated 21st May 1884, it was said—

"During his recent tour in Eastern Bengal the Lieutenant-Governor had had many opportunities of obtaining information on the working of the present Chaukidari Act, VI (B.C.) of 1870, and he was of opinion that there was much in its provisions that needed amendment, especially in the view of its being made to supplement the general scheme of Local Self-Government then under consideration."

And further on in paragraph 5 His Honor said—

"Practical action upon the recommendations of the Committee has been delayed because the view which the Lieutenant-Governor took upon the matter when the report first came before him was that the solution of many of the difficulties connected with the village police might be found in the introduction of an extended system of Local Self-Government, with which the control of the rural constabulary might possibly be amalgamated."

And the resolution (in paragraph 9) summed up His Honor's opinion as to the control of the rural police by saying—

"The Lieutenant-Governor's own view inclines to the conclusion that where, under the Local Self-Government scheme, Union Committees are established, the necessary control might be vested in them. Where there are no Union Committees, the Local Boards, under the presidency of the Sub-Divisional Officer, would provide the necessary agency."

These were very weighty words, and laid down a principle which the Council substitute for it a more competent and responsible body linked on to the scheme of Local Self-Government These benefits would be attained if the Council accepted his motion which, founded on reason, came also before them supported on the highest authority, viz. that of His Honor.

His Honor the President said he must take it upon himself to say at once that he thought the motion of the hon. member to introduce a section on the lines of this amendment was premature. It involved considerations which he for one should not like to dispose of on a sudden consideration of them now, and in respect of which he should not like to commit his successor. The hon. member quoted some observations of His Honor which reviewed at an early stage the question of Local Self-Government. That opinion had since then been circulated and general exception had been taken to placing the rural police under the control of Union Committees. The hon. mover of the amendment alluded to the fact that Union Committees would have large powers entrusted to them; but His Honor thought the hon. member would not find any allusion in the Local Self-Government Act to the idea of making over the police to the control and supervision of Union Committees, and the reason for that was that the Council which passed that Act were of opinion that the control of the police should not be entrusted to Union Committees. If they had thought such a measure desirable, it would have formed part of the powers to be entrusted to them in addition to the subjects of sanitation, public works, and the like. But the strongest objection to His Honor's mind was this, that the introduction of the Local Self-Government Act had just commenced throughout the country. The Government was at present dealing with the constitution and work of District Boards at sudder stations and of Local Boards at sub-divisional head-quarters, and they had found considerable difficulty in carrying out the measure. To his mind it was quite clear that until the working of the Local Government procedure in large stations and in sub-divisions had been secured, the Government could not think for a moment of extending the principles of that measure, and conferring upon local village institutions the powers under the Act. Therefore until Union Committees, the creation of which was permissive, were constituted, the extension of their powers under the provision proposed by the hon. member in this section seemed to his mind quite premature. When the time came for Union Committees to be established, it would be left to the Government of that day to decide whether the working of the rural constabulary could be made subject to the control of such bodies; for himself he thought it was too early to take that suggestion into consideration now.

The motion was then put to the vote and negatived.

The further consideration of the Bill was postponed till the next meeting of the Council.

AMENDMENT OF THE CALCUTTA AND SUBURBAN POLICE ACTS.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds, in moving that the clauses of the Bill to amend Act II (B.C.) of 1866 and the Calcutta Police Act, 1866 be considered, said that the Bill in the form in which it was amended by the Council at its last meeting had been circulated, and had been in the hands of members for some time, and as notice of no further amendment had been given, he might assume that the Bill as it had been amended was accepted by the Council.

The motion was put and agreed to.

On the motion of the Hon. Mr. Reynolds the Bill was then passed.

AMENDMENT OF THE VACCINATION ACT.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds, in moving that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Bengal Act V of 1880 be taken into consideration, said that the Bill had been very carefully considered by the Select Committee, and arriving in Calcutta to submit himself to be vaccinated. Very strong exception had been taken to the provisions of that section in a representation received from the Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber thought the provision was uncalled for, and was likely to produce much inconvenience to passengers. They said that the danger from small-pox in the case of ordinary passengers was extremely limited, and that in all passenger lines the passengers suffering from infectious disease were segregated in a separate cabin, apart from the other passengers and the members of the crew. The Select Committee took that into consideration, and he need hardly say that when the Bill was originally drafted there was no intention of putting the provisions of the section in force against such passenger lines as the Peninsular and Oriental Company and other well-known passenger lines of steamers, but the cases in the minds of the framers of the section were such as were referred to in the papers connected with the Bill, one of which was the case of the Darlington, an emigrant sailing vessel, and the other was the Empress of India, also a sailing vessel, a merchant ship. It was never of course intended that passengers should be subjected to any unreasonable detention on board ship, or that the Health Officer would act in the way in which the Secretary to the Chamber of Commerce apprehended that he would act.. At the same time, he admitted that the wording of the section might be interpreted to give powers which were liable to be abused, and the Select Committee took that into consideration and amended the section so as to allow the Health Officer, in case a vessel came into the port with a person suffering from small-pox on board, to oblige unprotected persons on board such vessel to submit themselves to vaccination. That would of course limit the operation of the section to a comparatively small number of cases, and would not give the wider and more complete protection which the section originally gave. At the same time, it met objections which, he must admit, were not unreasonable. Besides this, the Select Committee had introduced words to indicate under what circumstances the limited power thus given to the Health Officer was to be exercised. The section as it now stood would make it clear that if the Health Officer learned on enquiry that care had been taken to isolate infected persons on board, so that there would be no risk of the contagion being conveyed into the town, it would be unnecessary for him to exercise the powers which the section would otherwise give him, but that he should only do so in cases where it was necessary to put the section in force in order to prevent the risk of contagion being brought into the town. Then in regard to another section (section 6) further objection had been taken. The section gave somewhat extensive powers to public vaccinators, and it had been urged that they were not a class of persons to whom such powers could properly be entrusted. The section had now been restricted to the town and port and suburbs of Calcutta and Howrah, and its wording made it clear that it did not authorize a public vaccinator to enter any house at his pleasure. It merely allowed the Superintendent of Vaccination or medical practitioner or public vaccinator authorized by him to have such access to a house as he might require for the purpose of ascertaining whether the inmates were protected or not. The Chamber of Commerce in the 4th paragraph of their letter seemed to think that the section as it originally stood would give a public vaccinator powers of inquisition and visitation which it would not be safe to entrust to such officers. But the object of the section was to carry out within the town a system of house-to-house visitation, and therefore the section provided that when authorised by the Superintendent of Vaccination a public vaccinator might enter houses situated within his beat in order to ascertain whether the inmates were protected or not. The only other section to which attention need be drawn was section 8 of the amended Bill, by which the amount of the fine under sections 29A and 29B had been restricted to fifty rupees, a sum which the Select Committee considered sufficient to meet the cases provided for by those sections. He did not propose to ask the Council to pass the Bill on that day, but in the event of no objection being taken, he intended to move that the Bill be passed at the next meeting of the Council.

The motion was put and agreed to, and the clauses of the Bill were settled without amendment.

CALCUTTA MUNICIPALITY.

The HON. MR. HARRISON moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the amendment of the law relating to the municipal affairs of the town of Calcutta, and in doing so he said:—He had been given to understand that the Local Government had taken into consideration the report of the Committee, of which the Hon. Mr. Reynolds was President, for the amalgamation of the town and suburbs, and that the recommendations contained in the report of the Committee in their general features had been sanctioned. Also he had His Honor's authority for saying that the Government of India had in the main approved of the measure. Under these circumstances, it would probably be for the convenience of the Council and the public that a Bill embracing the chief outlines of the constitution of the enlarged municipality under the proposed amalgamation should be laid before the Council before it separated; and if this proposal met with the approval of the Council, he now asked leave to introduce a Bill before the termination of this session, that is to say, probably this day fortnight.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 10th April 1886.

SYSTEM OF ENGAGING NATIVE SEAMEN IN THE PORT OF CALCUTTA.

THE following papers relating to the system of engaging Native Seamen are published for general information.

R. H. WILSON,
Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

CALCUTTA,
The 16th March 1886.

Dated Calcutta, the 15th February 1883.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of Bengal, General Department.

IN connection with the amendment of the Merchant Shipping Act, the Chamber of Commerce have recently brought prominently to the notice of the Government the evils arising out of the present system of engaging native seamen at this port, and have suggested that the practice followed at the Bombay Shipping Office, by which every seaman is expected to possess a "continuous discharge" or record of the ships he has served on, which must be produced before he is allowed to ship again, would, if followed at Calcutta, check in a great measure desertion, and promote the interests alike of good seamen and of their employers.

2. The question thus raised seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to be one of great importance and of considerable difficulty. There can be no doubt that considerable abuses do exist under the present system, and the Lieutenant-Governor would therefore wish, before measures are taken to bring about any change in it, that the whole matter should be considered by a small committee. The following gentlemen are therefore appointed to consider and report upon the subject:—

PRESIDENT:

W. H. Grimley, Esq., C.S., Collector of Customs, Calcutta.

MEMBERS:

The Hon'ble R. Miller, of Messrs. Hoare, Miller & Co.
H. B. H. Turner, Esq., of Messrs. Turner, Morrison & Co.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution, and of the papers noted on the margin, be forwarded to each member of the committee for information.

Extract from a letter from the Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, dated the 19th April 1882.
Extract from a letter from the Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, No. 717B, dated the 21st August 1882.

Ordered also, that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, for the information of the Board, with reference to his letter No. 39B, dated the 13th January 1883.

Dated Calcutta, the 10th July 1884.

From—W. H. GRIMLEY, Esq., President of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging Native Seamen,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.

I AM desired by the Committee* appointed by Government to inquire into the system of engaging native seamen in the Port of Calcutta to submit the following report on the subject. The appointment of the Committee was first determined on in the Government Resolution of the 15th February 1883, but, owing to the absence of some of the members from Calcutta, and to other circumstances which have already been explained, the Committee did not begin work until the cold weather of 1883-84. The Hon'ble R. Miller, one of the original members, was unable to attend any of the meetings, and has taken no part in the enquiry. Captain Stiffe's place on the Committee, owing to his absence from Calcutta, was taken by Captain Brebner, his locum tenens in

2. The origin of the Committee may be thus explained :—The Bengal Chamber of Commerce, when commenting on the provisions of a Bill for the amendment of the Merchant Shipping Act, took occasion to bring to the notice of Government what they considered to be defects of the present system of engaging lascar crews in Calcutta, and to suggest certain remedies. Briefly, the representation of the Chamber amounted to this:—Under the present system, however careful a master of a vessel may be in selecting skilled and able-bodied seamen, he frequently finds himself at the last moment, when the ship is on the point of departure, provided with a worthless crew in spite of the fact that the men originally chosen have signed the ship's articles and received advances. The Chamber suggested several measures for correcting these evils, and, among others, proposed the introduction into Calcutta of the practice followed in the Bombay Shipping Office, by which every man "is expected to possess 'a continuous discharge' or record of the ships he has been in, which must be produced before he is allowed to ship again." The proposals of the Chamber were referred to the Board of Revenue for report; ‡ and after considering the comments and recommendations of the Board, the Government decided, before taking action thereon, to refer the whole question of lascar-recruiting to a Committee specially appointed to consider it.

‡ Government order No. 109T—G, dated 18th June 1882.

3. At the outset it will be well to describe in some detail both the existing system in Calcutta and the continuous discharge system which obtains in Bombay. The primary functions of a Shipping Master are set forth in the following extract from the provisions of section 4 of Act I of 1859, which may be regarded as containing the raison d'être of his office:—

"It shall be the general business of Shipping Masters appointed under this Act to superintend and facilitate the engagement and discharge of seamen in the manner hereinafter mentioned, to provide means for securing the presence on board at the proper times of men who are so engaged, and to perform such other duties relating to merchant seamen and merchant ships as are hereby or under the said Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, or as may hereafter, under the powers herein contained, be committed to them."

4. The English Merchant Shipping Act of 1854 contains similar provisions to the above in section 124, with the difference, however, that it enacts that it is the business of the Shipping Master to register the names and characters of the seamen engaged.

5. The Calcutta Shipping Office consists of a Shipping Master, a Deputy Shipping Master, and an Assistant Shipping Master. Formerly the Collector of Customs was ex-officio Shipping Master, but in 1881 the duties of the post were transferred to the Port Officer. The Shipping Master takes no active part in the executive working of the office, but is a referee for the decision of important or difficult questions arising in the course of business. He has a recognized responsibility for the successful working of the department, and the official account books and documents are signed by him, and reports and important letters are issued in his name. He sits in a different building from the Shipping Office, and as long as he does so, and has other heavy and responsible duties connected with the port to perform, it is scarcely possible for him to take a larger share in the business of the Shipping Office.

6. The real working head of the office is the Deputy Shipping Master, whose duties are embraced under the following heads:—

(1) Shipping and discharging European crews.
(2) Visiting European ships on arrival, enquiring as to voyage and health of crew, and examining into complaints.
(3) Receipt and repayment of deposits.
(4) Receiving money on account of seamen left in hospital or jail.
(5) Examining and signing documents and accounts connected with shipping and discharging, or relating to seamen who have died, or have been left in jail, or in hospital, or who have to be sent home.
(6) Correspondence and accounts with the Board of Trade, Board of Revenue, and Accountant-General, &c.

(9) Money-order agency.
(10) Receiving and remitting to bank general revenue and seamen's money-orders.
(11) Administering estates of deceased native seamen.
(12) References under section 44, Act I of 1859.
(13) Presiding at enquiries made jointly by the Health Officer of the Port and Assistant Shipping Master in matters relating to short issue of provisions and antiscorbutics, and auctioneer's compensation, &c.

7. The duties of the Assistant Shipping Master are the following:—

(1) To discharge and ship native crews in office.
(2) To discharge and ship native crews on board ships, as required. For this work an additional fee of rupees ten is payable to Government on each occasion.
(3) To check and examine the accounts of wages of native crews before they are paid off and discharged, and in the case of those who may be dead, left sick in hospital or in jail, to see that their wages and effects are deposited in the Shipping Office before any certificate of clearance is granted to the master, and to sign all documents connected with shipping and discharging.
(4) To visit all ships manned by lascars for the purpose of examining stores laid in for the voyage, with reference to the quality and quantity, as mentioned in the form of agreement * in scales (a) and (b), and to investigate complaints made by native seamen.

* Appendix B.

(5) He is the custodian of the effects of deceased seamen and of seamen in jail, and in this capacity is required to take an inventory of the articles when received, and again on making them over to the auctioneer for sale, and to sell them by auction when an auctioneer cannot be found.
(6) To take charge of the office whenever the Deputy Shipping Master is absent.

8. The arrangements for giving effect to the provisions of the Act, that the Shipping Master shall "superintend and facilitate the engagement and discharge of seamen," and "provide means for securing the presence on board at the proper times of men who are engaged," may be thus described. These matters will be considered in their natural order, viz., 1st, engagement, 2ndly, means for securing attendance on board ship, and 3rdly, discharge. In each of these operations the Shipping Office with its limited staff is unable to deal with the crews directly, but calls to its aid middlemen or agents, who are termed licensed shipping brokers. At the present time there are four† such brokers employed—two Hindoos and two Mahomedans—and each has deposited Rs. 1,000 security, and received a license.‡ As remuneration they receive 5 per cent. on advances and eight annas per head for each man engaged or paid by the ship.

† There is also a fifth man, who has held a license since the formation of the Shipping Office. He does not work, but merely retains his license in order to act for his son, a licensed broker, in case of illness.

‡ Appendix C.

9. Engagement.—The master of a vessel requiring a crew, makes it known to the Assistant Shipping Master, who informs the licensed broker direct, and the latter, on receiving the order, sends round information to the different parts of the town and suburbs where the seafaring classes are to be found, of the name and description of the vessel, her destination, the term of the engagement, the number and description of the crew required, and the time and place fixed for signing articles of agreement, viz., whether on board the vessel or at the Shipping Office. In due course a sufficient number of men appear at the appointed place, and there is sometimes a responsible officer in attendance—either the master or his chief mate. The officer present selects a serang and then the crew, but in most cases the selection of the crew is left, with the master's consent, to the serang. Sometimes also the chief engineer and purser attend for the purpose of superintending the selection of men for the engine-room and [illegible] officer's attention in this case being confined to the

and each man marshals his men in front of the Assistant Shipping Master's desk; the broker then steps forward, and standing in front of the men, reads out the main conditions of the agreement§ to them, explaining the nature and duration of the voyage, the scale of provisions, the time when the men are to be on board, and the rate of pay to be given to each class of men engaged. It frequently happens, however, that no one enters appearance on behalf of the ship, and the whole matter is in that case left to the licensed broker. The names of those who agree to serve are then entered in the articles of agreement, and each man is called up and receives an advance—usually one month's pay in cash. If an advance for a longer period is granted, only one month's pay is given in cash, and the remainder in the shape of an advance-note,‖ which the recipient is able to discount under certain conditions. The broker is provided by the ship's agent with the necessary funds for the advances. The payment of the advance, however, at this stage, is a mere form, for after signing the articles, or touching the pen of the Shipping Master in token of receipt of the money, each man returns it into a bag which is held by the broker's sircar, who informs him that he will call at his house and pay the advance on security being given. This is said to be necessary in the interest of the ship's agent and the broker, who would have no hold on the men if they were allowed to take away their advances. After collecting back all the advances, the sircar follows the lascars to their homes, and pays advances either to them or to their relatives, who, as is the custom, stand security for the amount. As a rule this work cannot be done by a less number than three sircars for each crew. In the absence of relatives, it is usual for the landlord or boarding-house keeper (generally spoken of as the "zamindar") to become security, and in this case the advance on being paid to the man is invariably handed over by him to his surety. Those who have families or relatives invariably live with them; others put up in boarding-houses. No security bond is executed, but if the surety can read and write, his signature is taken in the sircar's list of payments against the amount advanced. The boarding-house keeper has usually a claim against the man for board and lodging, and after recouping himself for this, he makes also a charge, varying from one to two rupees, for the risk he incurs in becoming security.

§ Appendix B.

‖ Appendix D

10. During the interval between shipping and the date of the departure of the vessel, if any cases of sickness, death or desertion occur, it is the business of the broker, on becoming aware of the fact, to report it to the master of the vessel, and to provide substitutes, who, if time permit, are taken before the Shipping Master and entered on the articles, when a further advance is given, the broker taking his chance of recovering the first advance from the security. It very rarely happens, however, that there is time to go to the Shipping Office, as substitutes are mostly put on board at the last moment.

11. Means for securing attendance on board.—Each broker has in his employ a certain number of assistants, who are indiscriminately designated in the Shipping Office sircars and runners, and twenty-four hours before the time fixed for joining the vessel, these assistants go to every individual member of the crew, and demand their clothes, chests, and bags, intending to put them on board the vessel on which they are engaged to serve. Should a man refuse to deliver up his chest, or make any suspicious demur or excuse, he is reported to the broker, who takes special care to watch his movements and to ship him on board, if possible, with or without the assistance of the police. The police aid cannot be called in until the man has actually failed to be on board at the appointed time. The broker is provided with blank forms of warrant* signed by the Captain of the vessel, addressed to the Inspector of Police, and, if police aid is required, this is filled up by the broker and taken to the police station, where a constable is supplied for the purpose of searching for and arresting the absentee.

* Appendix E.

12. In some cases men who are determined not to join will, in order not to arouse suspicion, hand over a chest of rags, or other useless articles together in one place, but are scattered about all over Calcutta and the suburbs. The visits of the broker or his assistants to each man must necessarily be very brief, especially as their presence is afterwards required on board the vessel in order to see that the men engaged are all in attendance. Very early the next morning the crew are mustered, and if men are wanting the broker or his assistant takes the names of the absentees, and hastens to the place where they reside, and if found, takes them on board; and, in the case of defaulters, provides substitutes in their place, as best he can.

13. Discharge.—The discharge takes place either at the Shipping Office or on board the vessel, and consists in paying the wages due to each man and giving him a certificate of discharge.† The men are assembled, and are called up in turn to the table at which the Assistant Shipping Master and ship's officer deputed for the work are seated. In some cases no ship's officer attends, but the work is left to the broker. It may be here observed that the broker gets no fee for this. As each man's account is adjusted—deductions being made for advances and sums due on board for clothes, tobacco, &c.—he is asked if the net amount arrived at is correct, and if he says that it is so, he is paid in cash; if he questions the correctness of the account, further enquiry is made, until the matter is satisfactorily adjusted. As the men are paid off the same operation is repeated which takes place when an advance is given at the time of shipping; each lascar without any demur empties his money into a bag, and the whole is handed over to the ship's serang for subsequent distribution among them.

† Appendix F.

14. With the exception of the British India Steam Navigation Company, the River Steam Navigation Company (in the case of one or two vessels), and the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company (in the case of one vessel), all the shipping firms in Calcutta engage the native crews they require through the agency of the Shipping Office, and the method of engagement, shipment, and discharge described in the preceding paragraphs is applied in the transactions of the Shipping Office with all these firms. But the case is different with the British India Steam Navigation Company. They have their own ghât serangs, who are responsible for supplying their vessels with all the crews they require, and consequently have no need of the services of the licensed brokers attached to the Shipping Office. These ghât serangs work independently of the licensed brokers, and are paid by a fixed salary rising from Rs. 20 to Rs. 25 a month, the steamers being distributed among them according to class. There are three ghât serangs for deck crews, two for saloon crews, and two for the engine-room. Besides the fixed salaries, the ghât serang gets 2½ per cent. on all advances. The ghât serang collects the men and takes them to the Shipping Office, but more usually the Shipping Office does not intervene until just before the vessel departs, when, on a requisition made by the Captain, the Assistant Shipping Master goes on board and enters on the articles of agreement the names of the engaged crew and the advance each man receives. At the time of discharge he again goes on board and witnesses the paying off of the men. Both at the time of shipment and discharge any money which the men receive is promptly handed to the serang to be adjusted later on in the manner above related.

15. It now remains to describe the Bombay system of continuous discharge. The system was introduced into the Bombay Shipping Office in 1875, primarily with the object of providing means for establishing the identity of native seamen who deserted with their advances, but it was also designed to enable the lascar in course of time to procure employment without the help of the serang, of whom it was expected he would become independent as soon as he had in possession a continuous record of approved service. The chief features of the system are as follow:—When a native seaman is engaged, a certificate* is filled in with particulars, which are carefully ascertained in the Shipping Office, of his age, height, and the marks on his person. The reverse of the certificate contains columns for showing the name of the ship, the dates of engagement and discharge, the character of the man as certified in the ship's log, &c. After the man's measure has been taken, and the distinguishing marks on his body ascertained, and these particulars have been entered in the certificate, the licensed shipping broker, who is in attendance, pays in the future be indebted for a ship, but to his own discharge certificate, which will regulate his promotion or degradation, and any increase or reduction of wages consequent thereon. The man's name is then entered in the ship's articles, with the number of his certificate, and he is now allowed to leave, but not to take away the certificate. This, after being copied in a register,† is put into a tin box and forwarded on board and placed under lock and key until the time of discharge comes round.

† Appendix H.

16. On the arrival of the vessel at the port of discharge all the tin boxes containing the certificates are taken to the Shipping Office, together with the official log book; and a clerk takes each certificate and fills in the particulars on its reverse, of the service, name of ship, character, &c., and these entries are signed by the master of the vessel and the Shipping Master. The like entries are made in the office register. The clerk then rolls up and returns the document to its proper case indicated by its number on the lid, and calls each man and hands his discharge to him, after which the man receives his wages in the presence of the Shipping Master and goes about his business.

17. If any lascar is found to have tampered with his certificate, it is taken from him and kept in the Shipping Office until he confesses, and he is then furnished with a fresh certificate with all the particulars corrected and authenticated, for which he has to pay eight annas, which is the charge made in the first instance. The death of any lascar afloat causes the document to be cancelled by writing across it the fact and the date.

18. There is space on the reverse of the certificate for many entries of discharge, and when all this is filled up, the seaman can obtain what is called a second issue certificate.* The face of this second issue gives an analysis of the characters entered on the first issue. This analyis is entered in a "register of second issues"† which is kept up in the Shipping Office.

* Appendix I.

† Appendix K.

19. These certificates, after the possessor has made a few voyages, show the exact worth of a man on board. If they show invariably a good discharge, he is engaged without reference to the serang or any other person; but if there is any falling off in ability or conduct, the offer of reduced wages is the inevitable result.

20. The Shipping Master of Bombay, Mr. Walker, through whose instrumentality the system was introduced there, has, in a recent communication, expressed himself on the subject in the following terms:—

"It is unnecessary for me to enter into details of how it was first introduced, beyond saying that instead of the former discharge, each seaman was given a registered certificate on being paid off, and was told to produce it when he again came forward to ship, and having done so he found that he was judged by his certificate and not by his former standing in the estimation of the serang, who was gradually ignored, and felt his power of dustooree gradually but surely slipping through his fingers, with the knowledge that the discovery was made too late.

"For the first two or three years it was very up hill work, and constant attention was requisite to prevent the perfunctory filling in of characters for conduct and ability in official log-books on the grounds that 'it did not matter one way or the other;' but in the course of time both officers and men discovered that matters were very much changed, and that those who were incompetent suffered in pocket and the good men came to the front in spite of serangs, who bitterly cursed the new certificates.

"Our position at the present moment is exactly the reverse of ten years ago. The serang is shipped, and each individual seaman shows his certificate and is rated accordingly, and promoted according to his merits on his certificate; but if he receives a bad character his wages are reduced Rs. 2 per month; at the same time no opportunity is lost of promoting those who are able to show a good record, in order to afford a practical illustration to those seamen who may be present, that their advancement and punishment in pocket rests with themselves alone.

"The discharge certificate is delivered up by the seamen on engagement, and remains in the vessel until he is discharged; and our experiment of 1875, which every one predicted would fail, is now an established fact, approved of by every one without exception, and is the sole guide accepted by those who ship native crews in Bombay."

21. Mr. Walker has also prepared the following note in explanation of the "Tin boxes to hold the certificate, with consecutive numbers stamped on the bottom of the box, not on the lid as with us, as very often the lids are changed and lead to confusion.

"Tin boxes.—Stout tin, one and a quarter inch diameter, 12 inches long; cost in Bombay (contract) one and a quarter anna each.

"Certificates.—Good, stout, and tough paper, with ruled blue lines on one side for particulars of service afloat.

"NOTE.—The most important part of the certificate is to ensure a correct measurement and correct description of the marks on person, particularly about the parts usually exposed, as head, face, throat, and arms, and any large or well-defined marks on the legs; but in the case of the firemen and coal-trimmers, scars on the front part of the legs are very common, and unless they are very large and particularly noticeable and unusual, we do not pay any attention to them, as they would do very little towards subsequent identification.

"The most important marks are missing finger-joints and toes, and injuries of a permanent nature, birth-marks, moles and warts, tatoo marks, and any special peculiarities in the eyes which, in the case of the majority of natives, are very dark or black. It would be as well to have a duplicate measuring standard, so that, having been measured and marks described by one clerk, he might go to another clerk and be checked off, so to speak.

"The seaman having been correctly measured and described, his certificate should be handed to the master of the vessel engaging him, who is then in possession of the particulars of the seaman he has shipped.

"The return of the vessel to port with the crew engaged as above.—The first thing called for is the official log-book and articles of agreement, which contains the number of the certificate opposite the name of the seaman, as also the certificates of discharge.

"NOTE.—The official log-book should contain the character of each seaman filled in (in ink): the two columns "ability" and "conduct," and every character below that of V.G., to be written in full.

"The bundle of tin-boxes are given to a sepoy to empty of their contents, which are spread out ready for the Shipping Office clerk to fill in the particulars of service from the articles and official log-book, and, before the discharge of the crew takes place, are signed by the master, followed by the Shipping Master or Deputy.

"Each seaman is called forward to receive his discharge, and a glance (after some practice) is sufficient to show if there has been any authorized change in the seaman (originally shipped) by sending a substitute, or whether the ghât serang has made some private arrangement in the matter, when he should be brought to book at once.

"I would not advise a promiscuous issue of certificates to seamen, but only to those who are engaged to serve, and who should be furnished with certificates before they are allowed to leave the Shipping Office; and the whole of the certificates thus issued should be sent on board the vessel.

"In no case should any alteration in the official log-book be allowed to be made (at the instance of any seaman) by the master.

"It should be the duty of one or more particular clerks to fill in the certificate after each erm of service and discharge, so as to preserve a uniform handwriting, when any alteration can be readily detected.

"NOTE.—A clerk of this office was dimissed for giving a better character than that in the log-book, and also for tampering with the register book.

"In the event of any erasure, the certificate is impounded, and a correct copy is re-issued to the seaman at a cost of eight annas, and the particulars of the alteration is noted on the copy above the name of the seaman.

"Bad discharges cause a reduction of wages in spite of anything the serang may say, who does not now attempt to interfere in regard to the wages of any of his men, as the seaman has only himself to thank for his high or low pay, and his certificate compels him to be independent, whether he likes it or not; and when he sees that he must stand alone, he very naturally asks himself why he should pay the serang any of his wages at the end of the voyage.

"I had some thoughts of having all names of native seamen, and their character for conduct and ability, copied into an indexed register book for ready reference in cases of alterations and forgeries; but such alterations are generally so very clumsily executed as to be easily detected, and they are becoming so rare with us that the register is not necessary; but we take a long time to make a correct copy, and in the meantime the seaman cannot ship because he has no certificate.

"In the event of your deciding to adopt the system of continuous discharges, you will find plenty of hard work to be got out of it at the commencement; but after about 12 months you will find it become easier as it gradually resolves itself into part and parcel of office routine but, once started, it wants sticking to and careful and constant watching, and in time it repays its first trouble by checking all bribery and compelling each man to stand alone and do his duty to the utmost of his ability, as he alone gains or suffers, without the power of interference on the part of serangs and those who ship them through shipping officers.

"The most important points may be summed up as under—

1*st.*—Correct name in full.

2*nd.*—Correct height.

5th.—No broker or ghât serang or any other person to be allowed to keep at any time certificate belonging to any other seaman on any pretence whatever.

6th.—Each seaman to pay (eight annas in Bombay) for his certificate, which will be given to him after the term of service has expired.

7th.—Each crew on engagement to be told that serangs have no right to any wages of any seaman on any pretence whatever.

8th.—Ticket cases should be stamped C (for Calcutta) to distinguish them from Bombay certificates.

22. The Committee are satisfied from the enquiries they have made into the state of the shipping business in Calcutta that the complaint of the Chamber of Commerce of the existence of serious defects in the present system of recruiting lascars is well founded. The system, they are of opinion, fails in a very essential particular in attaining the object for which the appointment of Shipping Master was created. The system provides for the engagement of seamen and for the official record of such engagement in the formal articles of agreement which are executed in the presence of the Shipping Master; but, to quote the words of the Act, it fails in "securing the presence on board at the proper times of men who are so engaged." To account for this state of things the Chamber aver—

(1) That the power of giving or withholding work is with the brokers;
(2) That the greater part, if not the whole, of the men's wages passes through the fingers of the brokers' servants;
(3) That notwithstanding the control which the broker thus obtains, the men engaged through the broker seldom go in the vessel;
(4) That deserters are very rarely prosecuted by the broker, but exceptionally are so with rigour;
(5) That men under long engagements frequently desert en masse, and that without any cause for complaint; and
(6) That on all such occasions fees upon re-engagement are payable to the Shipping Office and to the broker, and gratifications go, legally or illegally, to all those whose claims the lascar has learnt to recognise.

23. The purport of these allegations is to make the broker responsible for all the abuses which exist; but this is not substantiated by the enquiry which the Committee have held. In the first place, the broker's power over men seeking for work is not of that extensive and despotic character that the Chamber believe it to be, but is limited by a variety of circumstances. It was stated to the Committee that the deterioration among crews was really due to the fact that the demand was greater than the supply. This, however, can only be true so far as it refers to first-class seamen; for, as regards the ordinary lascar, the Assistant Shipping Master asserts that he has never experienced any difficulty in obtaining crews. When vessels get a bad repute for having very strict officers, or for working in port beyond the customary hours, or for being under-manned, difficulty may arise in getting a crew together. Then, again, the Calcutta lascars come from various parts of India and other countries,* and they reside in far away, scattered portions of the town: there are many avenues to employment open to them in Calcutta, as, for example, in the harbour, in the docks, in the railway, on steamers, flats, and tugs, and in the mills and engineering workshops which abound in the neighbourhood; and all these circumstances tend to make the Calcutta lascar independent of the broker.

* Chittagong, Sylhet, Sundeep, Dacca, Moorshedabad, Bamnee, Faridpore, Cuttack, Burdwan, Pandooah, Midnapore, Hooghly, Howrah, Calcutta, Rajgunge, Jeddah, Zanzibar, Muscat, Maldive, Lacadive, Aden, Mauritius, Malta, Port Said, Singapore, Manilla, Penang, Java, China, Bombay, Goa, Nagore, Bushire, Bagdad, and Bussorah.

24. The person who exercises undoubted authority over the lascar is the ship's serang. It has been before pointed out that in the appointment of a crew the first step is for the ship's officers to select a serang or two or more serangs according to the number required, and, this done, the choice of a crew is left to the serang. The President of the Committee has personally observed what goes on at the Shipping Office at the time of the engagement: the men

Shipping Office. That this should be the case shows that the men are in some way under the serang's influence. All this is in obedience to austoor, or the custom of the country, which all managers of households, as well as large employers of labour in workshops and mills, find it difficult to break through. Subordinate servants are bound by certain ties and obligations to those above them, and the outward expression of the obligation is generally a money payment; so it is with the serang: the men whom he engages, or recommends for engagement, consider themselves bound to him, and to all appearances willingly submit themselves to his control. The feeling of clanship is strong. When a serang gets a crew together, they will stick to him, and often refuse to go with another serang; they pay him salami and bazar money, which is intended to purchase for them extra comforts on board. It may be undeniable that they find it to their advantage, while on board, to be on good terms with the serang, and cheerfully submit to be mulcted in pocket, for at the end of a voyage the serang has generally a little bill against each man for food supplied and other matters. He generally has a man waiting outside the pay-room to look after the money each man gets; and although the rates of wages at which the men are shipped are entered in the agreement, they are no guarantee that the men are paid at this rate; for there is generally a separate and secret understanding with the serang as to the pay each man is to get. It is on this account that when the men are paid off the money is returned into a bag and handed over to the serang for re-distribution among them. One of the witnesses examined by the Committee produced the account of the crew of the S S. Shahzada, showing, out of a total pay of Rs. 160 allowed by the shipping company to a crew of nine men, only Rs. 140 actually reached the men, the remainder being deducted by the serang: Rs. 11-8 for food, but on what account the remainder was deducted is not stated. A serang, if taxed with taking back the pay of the men, will sometimes deny it. This has happened on more than one occasion when the President of the Committee has been present at the time of engagement and discharge of crews. Recently, in a case of discharge on ship-board, it was observed that each man, after receiving his money, left the saloon of the vessel where the wages were being distributed, taking his money with him. The President then enquired from the serang, who was in attendance at the pay-table, whether the men would be allowed to retain the money, or if it would be handed to him for redistribution. The serang promptly replied that the money would not be given to him; but on going outside the saloon it was found that the money was being collected into a handkerchief, and the men themselves said it would be given to the serang for redistribution, as there were accounts to be adjusted. It was noticed, too, that the ghât serangs* were outside the saloon, taking an evident interest in the collection of the money. It is fair to state that, the lascars did not appear to regard their having to return the money to the serang as a grievance: they evidently looked upon it as an ordinary transaction to which they were well accustomed. The presence of the ghât serangs at the time of payment opens out the obvious inference that they, equally with the ship's serangs, had claims against the men. It is understood that the ghât serang and ship serang adjust the accounts of each man, paying him, not according to the rates entered in the agreement, but as they may settle among themselves, and that the difference is divided between the ghât gerang and the ship's serang. The ghât serang, in the case of the British India Steam Navigation Company, occupies the same position as the licensed broker does in the case of vessels of other companies; and if the ghât serang makes "pickings" out of the wages of the men when they are paid off, it is a reasonable assumption that the brokers or their sircars do not abstain from following the same lead in the discharges with which they are concerned. It is, however, an exaggeration to say that "the greater part, if not the whole, of the men's wages passes through the fingers of the brokers' servants." Read "ship's serang" for "brokers' servants," and the statement will be true.

* It was a British India Company's vessel, which is recruited by ghât serangs, and not by the licensed brokers.

... of the Committee, Mr. Darashaw Ruttonjee

carried on in Calcutta, and he attended a meeting of the Committee and read an interesting paper giving the result of his enquiry, which will be found in appendix A. The firm to which this gentleman belongs holds the monopoly of the shipping business in Bombay, and he himself has had a practical every-day experience of the working of the continuous discharge system in that port, and from the evidence offered it will be seen that he is a warm supporter of that system, and professes a thorough belief in the advantages which it is said to bring to the lascars themselves.

26. It will be well at once to say that Mr. D. R. Chichgur is not entirely disinterested in the matter, for he volunteered, should any difficulty be found in introducing the Bombay system into Calcutta, to bring over a portion of his firm and take the place of the present licensed brokers here, and his evidence must be read with this knowledge. But whatever may be the motives by which he was animated in coming to the assistance of the Committee in the conduct of their enquiry, the Committee must express their obligations to him and accept his statement as a fairly correct description of what takes place in Calcutta, seeing that it generally accords with the account which the Committee have derived from their own observation, as well as from other sources.

27. It would appear that after a man has signed the ship's articles of agreement to serve for a certain nominal rate of pay, the real rate which he is to receive is a matter of subsequent arrangement between him and the serang; when this has been fixed, the lascar has to satisfy the claims (1) of the boarding-house keeper where he lives, (2) of the person who becomes surety* for his advance, and (3) of the ghât serang or broker's men, as well as to provide for his own family. Having made his calculation, if he is dissatisfied with his engagement, or has difficulties in fulfilling it, or better employment offers, he has no scruples in throwing it up and returning the advance to the serang, who has then to find a substitute, who is put on board, often without any reference to the Shipping Office, and shipped in the name and under the articles of the original man engaged. The Committee are assured by the commanders of vessels whom they have consulted that the supply of substitutes is a matter of constant occurrence, and that they have no means of checking it. The third head of the Chamber's complaint has therefore been fully established, that "notwithstanding the control which the broker thus obtains, the men engaged through the broker seldom go in the vessel."

* Generally a relation of the boarding-house keeper.

28. To consider next the fourth charge, "that deserters are very rarely prosecuted by the broker, but exceptionally are so with rigour."

This is a correct statement, and the causes of the broker's inaction may be thus summed up—

(1) The persons empowered by law to prosecute are the master, or any mate, or the owner, ship's husband or consignee; and the broker is unable to prosecute without authority from one of these, which he cannot always obtain.

Section 86, Act I, 1859.

(2) The difficulty of finding the man, for he can easily get away either by taking service in a home trade vessel, being shipped by a ghât serang; or he may conceal himself, or find employment in a variety of ways.

(3) If a man has found a substitute, it is hardly treated as a case of desertion; and as there is no loss of the advance, the broker and the shipping firm have no pecuniary interest in prosecuting the man. The fact, however, of the man's absenting himself is made known to the ship's agents.

(4) It is only when a substitute has not been provided that the broker is interested in prosecuting.

(5) The charge which the police makes of Rs. 6 as an arresting fee

(6) The police have not the same stimulus to arrest native absconders as they have in the case of European deserters, for in the latter case they pocket the arresting fee if the man is caught, but get nothing in the case of the native.†

† The reason of this distinction is that the European sailor has generally wages due from which the fees can be recovered; but not so the lascar.

(7) The trouble to the broker of attending the Police Court, which is some distance from the Shipping Office, and consequent loss of time and money.

It will thus be seen that it is not to the pecuniary interest of the shipping firm, the broker, or the police officer that the deserter should be arrested, and with human nature such as it is, nothing short of a drastic enactment compelling, on pain of a penalty, shipping firms and brokers to prosecute in all cases of desertion, including cases where unauthorized substitutes are provided, will suffice to remedy the evil Such an enactment, the Committee consider, would hardly find favour with the shipping community.

29. The cases of desertion en masse, referred to by the Chamber in their 5th article of reproach against the Shipping Office, have been thus explained. The British India Steam Navigation Company and the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company have running agreements with their crews for six months, but make a practice of paying the balance of wages due to every one on board on the return of the vessel to Calcutta, which in many cases is every six weeks. This is done to close the vessel's accounts for the voyage. The lascar having received his full pay, pleases himself whether he fulfils his six months' agreement or not; and he is aided in the resolve by the action of the ship's agents, who purposely allow the lascars, when in port, to leave the vessel, finding it a more satisfactory arrangement to engage what are termed "batta" lascars for the work in port. The man is paid up to date, and is given a holiday when the ship arrives in port, and his desertion, or not turning up when the vessel is ready to depart, is thus made easy. There would be the same obstacles to prosecutions as have already been pointed out. The Assistant Shipping Master, however, brings to notice that there are many exceptions to these cases of general desertion: men are taken on board by the ship's serang and substituted for others that are left behind, being made to answer to their names; and in this way the Shipping Office suffers in fees. It may be mentioned that the actual desertions, as distinguished from cases in which substitutes are supplied, and excluding what are above spoken of as desertions en masse, are estimated as not exceeding 7 per cent. of the engagements.

30. The last clause of the Chamber's indictment, that "on all such occasions" (i.e. after desertions en masse) "fees upon re-engagement are payable to the Shipping Office and to the broker, and gratifications go, legally or illegally, to all those whose claims the lascar has learnt to recognise," follows almost as a corollary from what has gone before, and scarcely needs discussion, except by way of suggesting the measures to be adopted for remedying the abuses. But it is only in the case of the crews of the vessels of the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company that the licensed broker would gain, seeing that the British India Steam Navigation Company do not employ licensed brokers, but ghât serangs. The suggestion, however, of a remedy is much more easy than its application. The object being to prevent the broker from deriving any profit from the desertion of a lascar, it is a simple matter to lay down a rule that there shall be no second payment of fees for re-engagement consequent upon such desertion; but how is the fact of desertion to be proved? The men habitually ship under assumed names, and identification is almost impossible; so that the enforcement of the rule of non-payment would be in most cases difficult under the present system. It is clear, therefore, that the system needs to be remodelled and reconstructed on entirely fresh lines. This part of the subject will be discussed in the succeeding paragraphs.

31. The following measures have been suggested by the Chamber of Commerce for correcting the evils of the present system:—

32. On the first point the Board of Revenue in their letter No. 717B dated 21st August 1882, to the Government of Bengal, have thus remarked:—

"As regards the first proposal made by the Chamber of Commerce, viz. the withdrawal of the brokers' licenses, the Assistant and Deputy Shipping Masters are both of opinion that the faults of the present system are not attributable to the brokerage system so much as to the employment by shipping firms of private sirdars, who are called "ghât serangs," and who are said to arrange for the supply of lascars without, in the first instance, the intervention of a licensed broker. These men are said to work generally in collusion with the ship's serang, and to be one of the chief causes of the "substitute" system, as they are pecuniarily interested in palming off inferior men on ship-masters in place of the able-bodied seamen with whom the engagement in the first instance was made. To the operations of these men and of the seamen's zemindars, boarding-house keepers, and other crimps, the condition of thraldom of the native lascar is, according to these officers, mainly due, and not to the conduct of the licensed brokers, against whom it is stated that complaints are very rare. The Deputy and Assistant Shipping Masters are both strongly of opinion that the abolition of the brokerage system and the employment of "runners" paid by Government, as suggested by the Chamber, is impracticable, and could not succeed at this port. It is represented that in England the seamen's quarters are generally in the neighbourhood of the shipping, the men are on the look out for work and ready to respond to the runner's call: here, however, the native seamen's lodging-houses are scattered throughout certain outlying parts of the suburbs, and the men have to be constantly hunted up and kept well in hand to ensure their going on board after they have agreed to do so. For this work it is claimed that a native agency of the broker kind is much more suited and efficient than any staff of Government officials could possibly be."

33. The Committee, while bound to admit the rarity of the complaints against the licensed brokers, do not draw the same distinction as the Board of Revenue have done between the probity of a "ghât serang" and the probity of a licensed broker. The remarks of the Board disclose the misapprehension on their part that several firms make use of "ghât serangs" in preference to licensed brokers; but this is not the case, the fact being that Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie and Company are the only company that employ "ghât serangs" on a large scale;* and as a curious comment on the remarks of the Board, it may be added that this firm has no complaint to make against the present system, and says, moreover, that, "whenever they engaged crews through the licensed brokers, difficulties arose." Speaking generally, the Committee would say that ceteris paribus, the broker and his assistants are just as likely to fleece the lascars, and cheat the shipping firms, and have quite as many opportunities of doing so, as the ghât serangs and their subordinates. It is, however, a question of integrity, and it may be said that the licensed brokers, coming from a higher and more educated class, and getting a higher pay than the ghât serang, the balance of integrity inclines much more to the former than the latter. It may be asked why cannot the body of shipping firms do without the aid of licensed brokers, in the same way as Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie and Company do, and apparently with very satisfactory results to themselves? The answer to this is that this firm has in its service a very large fleet, and can afford to employ private brokers, i.e. ghât serangs, on fixed salaries, having constant occupation for them; but Government is required to legislate, not for the one firm, but for the many which are very differently circumstanced in respect of their crew requirements from the firm above mentioned. It would, the Committee have ascertained, be very distasteful to shipping firms in general to be deprived of the offices of licensed brokers. The Committee, then, are not disposed to recommend their abolition.

* Messrs. Macneil and Company employ them in the case of one or two vessels occasionally.

34. The objection to adopting the Chamber's second proposal to substitute advance notes for cash advances is the difficulty of enforcing such a rule, as seamen will refuse to engage on such terms, because of the discount. An advance note is payable three days after a vessel leaves, and a man has to pay from one to two rupees to get a note discounted.

35. The next proposal is to reorganise the Shipping Office on the English model. The English system is thus described by the Chamber:—

"There are [illegible] in England licensed brokers for the engagement of seamen,

Office, in a room set apart for the purpose, and plenty more within hail. The master makes his selection, an agreement is come to as to terms, the proper fees are paid and articles are signed. An assistant of the Shipping Master, called a "runner," takes down each man's name and address, and such other particulars as he may deem requisite.

"At the time appointed for the vessel's sailing, the runner proceeds on board, usually accompanied by a few men willing, in case of need, to go as substitutes. The runner musters the crew, takes down the names of absentees, and puts substitutes in their places, such substitutes signing articles in presence of the marine official.

"After the vessel has sailed, the runner waits upon the owner of the ship, and enquires whether he desires to prosecute the absentees; if so, the runner lodges an information and presses the charge."

36. The system here described does not differ very materially from the practice obtaining in the Calcutta Shipping Office, excepting that the broker element is eliminated from the scene. If runners were employed instead, they would be doing the work which the brokers' assistants now do, with the difference that they would be paid by Government instead of by the brokers: they would be changed in name only, but not in character; they would have precisely the same means at their command for tricking the lascar as they now have: a single runner could not do in Calcutta the work for a ship that he does in England; there the lodgings of the men are close at hand and within a ring-fence, so to speak, but here they are so distant and scattered that several runners would be required to muster a ship's crew. In England men present themselves at the Shipping Office independently of each other in search of employment; but lascars in Calcutta will not do this. They go in clans, and will only sail with a particular serang, who is frequently a headman in their village, and probably also a relation of the leading men of the crew. It would therefore remain that whereas the licensed broker can be made responsible for abuses detected, the responsibility in future would be shifted from his shoulders and distributed in a fragmentary manner among a large number of individuals, and consequently be difficult to determine. In the course of the enquiry, Mr. Pirrie, the Marine Superintendent of the Asiatic Steam Navigation Company, pressed for the appointment of runners paid by Government, whose duty it would be to prosecute deserters with the owner's consent. The Committee, however, do not see that the substitution of runners for the licensed brokers would afford a solution of the question, although they agree with Mr. Pirrie, and with others whose counsel they sought, that more might be done in the way of prosecution of absentees. The following remarks of Mr. Pirrie on this point, in the penultimate paragraph of his letter dated the 8th February 1848,*. are very pertinent and deserving of consideration :—

Appendix A.

"I would strongly urge that the Shipping Master should be given assistance in the way of detecting and arresting deserters, whether by means of runners or of a few speciat policemen. I think also that it should be a condition of the broker's license that he must arrest and prosecute all men who do not join, under a penalty of forfeiture of earnings. These men have virtually the whole control of the lascars in their hands, and if only their conduct can be controlled so as to make them perform their work properly, a great deal of the difficulty will have been got over. It is only the certainty of prosecution and the conviction which follows that makes an Englishman join his ship, and I submit respectfully to the Committee that until a similar knowledge is instilled into the Calcutta lascar, and those who have to deal with him, he will still continue to personate, cheat, and desert his vessel as long as he finds he can do so with impunity."

37. It now remains to consider the last suggestion of the Chamber of Commerce, viz. the advisability of adopting the Bombay plan of "continuous discharge." The detailed description of that system in paragraphs 15, 16, and 21 of this report clearly demonstrates, in the opinion of the Committee, the numerous advantages which it possesses over the faulty method of shipping seamen now obtaining in Calcutta. Under it a man with a good discharge can command terms, be sure of finding employment, and in course of time become practically independent of the licensed broker and ghât serang. The knowledge that the loss of the certificate will inevitably follow desertion, since it is kept on board with the captain of the vessel, must obviously tend to diminish the number of absentees, while the careful record which is kept of each lascar's appearance must be of great assistance in furthering his arrest in the event of actual desertion.

38. Passing objection has been raised to the continuous discharge system, on the ground that it was merely the revival of the plan of register tickets which had proved inoperative both in England and in India. Reference is made to the preamble of the English Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, and of the Indian Act I of 1859, but the former preamble contains no allusion to the subject. The preamble, however, of Act I of 1859 contains the following expression:—"Whereas the law for the registry of seamen, and the grant of register tickets, has been found to be ineffective for the purpose intended, * * * and whereas it is expedient to discontinue the practice of registry and the grant of register tickets." The Committee have not succeeded in obtaining any official account of the circumstances which led to the abolition of the registry system in England; all they have been able to ascertain on the subject is that the English law formerly enacted that "every person, being a subject of Her Majesty, intending to serve on any ship subject to the provisions of this Act (except as master, or physician, surgeon, or apothecary), shall, and he is hereby required to, provide himself with a register ticket." The system of register tickets, as practised in England, was introduced into India by Act XXVII of 1850; but although the Act extended to native as well as European seamen, the Committee opine, from the tenor or wording of the Act, that its provisions were framed chiefly in view of the circumstances of the latter class, and that it was a mere incident to the Act that they also applied to natives. The register tickets were done away with in England in 1851, but it is not until 1857 that any proposal was made to abolish them in India. In the meantime the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854 had been brought on to the English statute-book. In 1857 a Bill was introduced into the Indian Legislative Council, which afterwards became Act I of 1859. The principal objects of the Bill were to adapt to India—

Acts 7 and 8 Vic., chap. 112, sec. 20.

"* * * the general provision of the third part of the English Act, 1854, relating to masters and seamen, so as to place ships registered in India in the same position as to the qualification and duties of masters and the shipment and duties of seamen on the same footing as ships registered in the United Kingdom, with such exceptions as to native vessels or seamen as may be deemed advisable."

In introducing the Bill to the Council, the mover said:—

Debates of Legislative Council Act, October 24th, 1857.

"The present law on the subject was comprised in Act XXVII of 1850, which was entitled an Act for the registry of merchant seamen, and in Act XXVIII of the same year, which was entitled an Act for the encouragement of merchant seamen. The Registry Act was generally considered to have failed of its object altogether. One palpable cause of this failure was that the Act, according to the construction put upon it by the Supreme Government in 1851, rendered it imperative on the Registrar to grant a register ticket to every seaman who was unprovided with one, even though the seaman might have forfeited his previous ticket by desertion from his vessel. But independently of this defect, the whole system introduced by the Act was thought to be ineffective. Apparently the same system had been found equally ineffective in England, for the practice of granting register tickets had been abolished there in 1853. There seemed to be very sufficient reasons for abolishing it here likewise."

The Advocate-General, after stating his opinion on a question referred to him in connection with the bill, proceeded to say—

"I think it will be desirable also that the system of registry tickets, which has been abolished in England since it was introduced by Act XXVII of 1850 in India, should be abolished here also, at all events as to sailors not being natives or lascars, and that the whole system of the engagement of seamen should be regulated in the same manner as in England."

The words "at all events as to sailors not being natives or lascars" made it clear that the registry system was done away with solely from reasons connected with its working in the case of European sailors, and without any reference to native seamen. This disposes of the argument that the system of continuous discharge, as regards the latter class of men, had practically been found inoperative.

39. An objection is brought against the system that it would encourage fraudulent personation and traffic in certificates in the bazar. To this it may be been proposed. If the system is worked carefully and strictly, the descriptive record of personal appearance entered in the certificate will facilitate the detection of fraudulent personation, and quickly check the sale and hire of certificates in the bazar. It will be useless to attempt to introduce the system into Calcutta, except the rules be rigidly adhered to: abuses are certain to follow a perfunctory and lax working of them.

40. Again, it is said that "certificates endorsed with misconduct would be destroyed, while applications for a new continuous discharge could not practically be refused." This is an objection common to all employments where certificates of service are granted. The practice carries with it its own punishment as well as its own reward, for the system of continuous discharge being firmly established, the man without certificates would find himself but little better off than the man with bad certificates when entering into competition with men possessing a good record of services.

41. It is further remarked that the "Legislature could not be expected to pass an Act prohibiting a lascar from obtaining further employment because he had lost his continuous discharge," which amounts to saying that the system should not be made compulsory by enactment. The Committee entirely admit the force of this argument, and are prepared to say that if the system is introduced it must be on the voluntary principle, it being left to the good sense of the shipping company to make the possession of a "continuous discharge" an indispensable condition of employment. Government may direct that every lascar at the time of engagement shall take out a certificate in the form of the continuous discharge certificate,* that during the voyage it shall remain with the master of the vessel, and that at the time of discharge it shall be produced in the Shipping Office, and returned to the lascar after the particulars of service and character have been duly endorsed thereon; but it cannot compel the lascar to retain the certificate, or to produce it when seeking a fresh engagement. But if masters of vessels will set a value on the possession of a certificate, the lascars will soon learn to do the same. The Committee recognise the advantages which the continuous discharge system has over the present mode of conducting business in the Shipping Office, and consider that it is likely to prove an effective remedy for the evils brought to notice; but in recommending its introduction into Calcutta, they are sensible of the fact that the success of the experiment must depend on the thorough co-operation of shipping companies. If those companies are in earnest in their desire for reform, the Chamber of Commerce will no doubt be able to secure their assistance in giving the scheme a fair trial. It will be necessary for shipping companies to instruct the masters of their vessels to give preference to certificated men; to make proper arrangements for taking care of the certificates placed in their charge on board; to return to the Shipping Office the certificates of men who fail to join; to duly send all the certificates to the Shipping Office at the termination of the voyage, together with the official log-book containing the character of the men; to sign the entries in the certificate against each man; and to assist the Shipping Office in every possible way in giving effect to the new arrangements.

* Appendix G.

42. In one particular especially will it be necessary for the shipping companies to give up something to which they have been accustomed, at any rate in the very beginning of the change of system. A practice obtains of shipping and discharging crews on board-ship instead of at the Shipping Office in the case of almost all vessels in the home trade. Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie and Company, who employ ghât serangs to get their crews together, are chiefly interested in maintaining the practice. It is thought that at time of shipment the chances of desertion are lessened, the crew being better kept together on board than at the Shipping Office, while at the time of discharge it is more convenient to the shipping officers that the work should be done on board. It is possible that the withdrawal of the concession may give rise to opposition on the part of the firm that chiefly benefits by it; but it is of paramount importance that the new system should have a fair trial, and this will not be possible if shipment and discharge on board are allowed as heretofore. The measurement and examination of the men, the entries in the certificates and registers, the examination of the log book, are details which cannot be carefully attended to on board in the hurry and rule be passed forbidding work on ship-board, and making it compulsory for all shipments and discharges to be effected at the Shipping Office. After some months, when the arrangements are in good working order, it may perchance be found possible to renew the concession in the case of discharges.

43. As to the procedure at the time of shipment, when each man returns the advance to the broker's man, the Committee feel some difficulty in recommending that the practice should be absolutely forbidden. The broker being responsible to the ship's agent for the amount advanced, should be allowed to make the best arrangement he can to guard against loss. Were the men allowed to carry away their advances before the consent of the surety had been secured, the broker would suffer loss in the event of desertion. If the taking back of advances inside the Shipping Office should be forbidden, it would go on outside unchecked. The practicability of making the surety attend at the Shipping Office when the advance is given has been considered, but it is open to several objections. It is not known what men will be required to furnish security until the selection has been made and the articles signed, and sureties would not attend the office on an uncertainty. Men are not shipped until three days before a vessel leaves, and time would not admit of any delay by withholding advances until the sureties could attend. Females, when they are relatives of the men, are the best securities, and they would not care to come to the office. Lastly, the broker, without a local enquiry, would not be able to satisfy himself as to the sufficiency of the surety. It occurs, however, to the Committee that the difficulty will correct itself when the new system is well established, as the shipping firms will doubtless be able to authorise the broker to dispense with security in the case of men who possess a long record of "good" or "very good" discharges.

44. The case, however, is different as regard the distribution of wages. The Shipping Office has no concern with the private transactions between the serang and the men, and ought not to countenance what takes place at the pay-table. The Committee recommend that the ship's serang should be paid last, and that as each man receives his pay he should be told by the Shipping Master that he can take it away, and that the serang has no power to touch any portion of it. Notices should be placed in conspicuous parts of the Shipping Office, forbidding serangs to take back the wages of men, and warning them that any serang detected in contravening this rule will be expelled from the Shipping Office and not allowed to re-enter it for a period of six months. The Shipping Office cannot do more than this; it is powerless to prevent any money transactions which may take place outside between the serang and the men.

45. The Commttee recommend that licensed brokers be required, within 24 hours after the departure of a vessel, to deliver to the Shipping Master a list of deserters, including all for whom substitutes have been provided, and to prosecute in each case except on good cause shown to the satisfaction of the Shipping Master. On receipt of the list, the shipping Master should examine it, and in those cases in which the broker declines to prosecute, should enquire from the ship's agent whether this is done with their approval. A register should be kept in the Shipping Office showing (1) names of absentees, (2) name of vessel, (3) name of ship's agent, (4) result of prosecution, (5) reason for declining to prosecute, and (6) remarks.

46. At the same time the master of the ship should return the certificates of the men who are not on board, under cover, to the Shipping Master, who would thus have a check on the reports of the broker.

47. The high rate of fee for arresting seamen frequently prevents prosecutions, and the Committee propose that, in the case of native seamen, it be abolished altogether.

48. The licensed brokers furnish security, but they do not execute any security bond. The Committee consider that they should do so, lest any difficulty should arise in the event of its being necessary to forfeit the security.

49. The Committee recommend that the Shipping Master and the Deputy Assistant Shipping Masters be each vested with magisterial powers to

50. It would tend to check false personation, if, at the time of engagement a card were given to each man, to be delivered to the licensed broker at the time of mustering the crew on board, showing his name, the registered number of his certificate, and the marks of identification.

51. In order to carry out the recommendations contained in this report it will be necessary to strengthen the establishment of the Shipping Office by the addition of two clerks, one on Rs. 25 and the other on Rs. 20 per mensem.

52. The Parsee gentleman from Bombay, Mr. Darashaw Ruttenjee Chichgur, who gave the Committee the result of his experience as a licensed broker in Bombay, expressed his willingness to come to Calcutta if encouraged to do so, and take up the business of a licensed broker here, either himself or through a member of his firm, in order to see the scheme fairly started. He was ready, he said, to bring over whole crews from Bombay, in order to set the matter fairly going, and to meet any difficulty in case the Calcutta brokers and ghât serangs should strike. Mr. D. R. Chichgur produced papers showing that the Government of Bombay had on more than one occasion acknowledged with approbation his valuable services as head licensed broker but though the Committee have every confidence that, if entrusted with the work of introducing the continuous discharge system into Calcutta, he would be able to bring the experiment to a successful issue, they do not advise that the offer be accepted at present. They would prefer to see the system introduced under the auspicies of the present staff of licensed brokers: if the attempt should fail, it will then be time to call in the assistance of the Bombay broker. It is therefore proposed that a trial be made for a year, and if at the end of that time the scheme is not in good working operation, that the services of the present licensed brokers be dispensed with, and the Bombay broker be invited to take up the whole of the Calcutta business.

53. The system of licensed boarding-houses for native seamen, referred to in the annexure to Government order No. 2397, dated 17th November 1883, will, under proper care and supervision, and with certain modifications, be found a useful auxiliary to the continuous discharge system. The practice of requiring native boarding-house keepers to take out licenses under Act IV (B.C.) of 1866 formerly existed, but fell into disuse in 1869. It was, however, revised in 1880 with the express object of checking the practice of giving substitutes. To this end the following conditions are included in the license:—

"10*th*.—That he shall keep a register of native seamen admitted into his boarding-house, showing their names, last ship, date of admission and date of departure, and, if shipped, the name of the ship for which they have engaged; and that he will submit monthly returns of the same to the office of the Commissioner of Police on or before the 5th of every month.

"11*th*.—That he shall give immediate information to the Shipping Master in every case in which a seaman, who has left the boarding-house on engagement, returns to it before the completion of the term of his last engagement."

In order to see that the registers are properly maintained, police inspectors in charge of thanas are required to inspect all such registers in the boarding-houses in their sections, and to report in what state they find them. The President of the Committee has sent for and examined many of these registers, and has observed that they bear in places the signature or initials of the inspecting officer, but that there was nothing on record to show whether any irregularity had been brought to light, or any action taken for correcting it. This is clearly not the kind of inspection that was intended or is desirable, and some reform is necessary in this particular. But it is not understood to what extent periodical inspections by the police of these registers can check the practise of giving substitutes; all that such inspections, however carefully conducted, can do, is to bring to notice whether the registers are neatly prepared and written up to date, and have a general appearance of being properly maintained. The police have no materials at hand for testing the correctness of the entries in the registers, viz. of ascertaining whether A.B., entered as having joined a certain vessel on a particular date, did actually join. These materials, under the continuous discharge system will be in the Shipping Office in the form of the list of absentees and the returned certificate referred to in paragraphs 45 [illegible] It is therefore much more essential that the scrutiny of the clause 10 of the condition of the boarding-house license, the words "Commissioner of Police" be altered to "Shipping Master." Each licensed boarding-house keeper will thus be required to submit to the Shipping Master, before the 5th of each month, a return or copy of his register for the previous month; and by comparing it with the list of absentees in his office, the Shipping Master will be enabled to see whether the register is correctly prepared, and to detect instances in which deserters have been harboured contrary to the provisions of the license; and with prosecution and cancelment of the license immediately following detection, the system of licensed boarding-houses can be made to fulfil the special object for which it was revived in 1880. In making the above recommendation the Committee do not intend to propose that the police surveillance of the boarding-houses should cease: that will still be required in order to ensure that every boarding-house keeper shall take out a license; and indeed, without close supervision and control by the police, the system is likely to fall once more into desuetude.

Minutes of the Meeting of the Committee appointed to enquire into and report on the system of engaging Native Seamen in the Port of Calcutta, held on Friday, the 18th January 1884.

The Assistant Shipping Master in attendance.

After stating generally the object for which the Committee had been appointed by Government, the President called upon Captain Brebner to explain what was meant by the continuous discharge system in force in Bombay. Captain Brebner then produced a form of certificate of discharge, and stated that the practice in Bombay, of which he himself had had some personal experience, was for the seaman to produce the certificate at the time of very engagement, when it was handed to the Master of the vessel, and not returned to him until he received his discharge. The endorsements on the certificate shewed the dates of each engagement and discharge, and was thus a complete record of a seaman's service. The certificates were valuable aids to getting employment, and it was usual for the men to keep them in tin cases, which they handed to the Master along with the certificates. Captain Brebner suggested that, if adopted in Calcutta, they should be printed on parchment. He expressed himself in favour of getting rid of all the brokers at present licensed, and all the ghât serangs: he would invite Parsee brokers from Bombay to come to undertake the Calcutta business of shipping seamen.

Mr. Hunton, Assistant Shipping Master, who had been invited to attend, in answer to questions stated that there were at the present time four licensed brokers, viz., two Hindoos and two Mahomedans; three had been brokers, before he, Mr. Hunton, joined the office, and one had been appointed since. They each deposited Rs. 1,000 security, they were the descendants of men who had been brokers for years, the posts being handed down from father to son. He had never received any complaints from the seamen themselves against the brokers but only against their sircars. These were complaints of extortion.

It was eventually resolved that the following firms should be invited to favour the Committee with an expression of their views on the whole question, and to give the names of those gentlemen who, from their intimate knowledge of the working of the present system of engaging lascars, would be able to afford the Committee useful information on the subject, especially including the names of officers in their employ who had had some practical experience of the working of the continuous discharge system in Bombay. It was also resolved that [illegible] should be asked to [illegible]

MR. WYLIE	...	On behalf of Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie & Co.
CAPTAIN ATKINSON	...
CAPTAIN MCCONNELL	...	On behalf of Messrs. Turner, Morrison & Co.
MR. PIRRIE	...

Captain Atkinson—Said that he had observed of late, when forwarding Bombay crews to be discharged in Bombay, that some portion of such crews did not produce continuous-discharge certificates, and that those who had bad entries recorded against them took means to erase them, for example, by burning them out. The continuous-discharge system* was theoretically good, but there were means of evading it, which would be successful so long as Masters engage crews without insisting on the production of the certificate.

* For the sake of brevity this will be called the C.-D. system hereafter in these notes.
W. H. G.

Mr. Pirrie—Referred to the preamble of Act I of 1859, and pointed out that the register tickets there mentioned was practically the same as the C.-D. system, and it would be seen from the preamble that the system having been found inoperative was the cause of the enactment of Act I of 1859.

With reference to Captain Atkinson's remarks, Mr. Hunton was called upon to produce the agreements of some Bombay crews, which happened to be at hand. He produced the agreements of the Henzada and Golconda crews, and on examination of these shewed in the Henzada 37 out of a crew of 82 without a C.-D. certificate and on the Golconda 17 out of 70.

Mr. Wylie—Stated that the British Indian Navigation Company had no reason to complain of the present system. They shipped their crews through their own ghât serangs, who were responsible for supplying their vessels with all the crews required; these ghât serangs worked quite independently of the licensed brokers. Whenever they engaged crews through the licensed brokers, difficulties arose. The ghât serangs are paid by a fixed salary, from Rs. 20 to Rs. 25 a month, the steamers being distributed among them according to class.

There are three ghât serangs for deck crews.

There are two ghât serangs for saloon crews.

There are one ghât serang for engine-room crews.

Beside the fixed salaries, the ghât serangs get 2½ per cent. on all advances, the advances being paid in the Shipping Office nominally to the seamen engaged, but virtually to the serang.

Captain Atkinson—Remarked that he agreed with Mr. Wylie, and that those who complained against the present system probably did not offer sufficient inducement in the shape of wages to the crews engaged. The deterioration in crews was really due to the fact that the demand was greater than the supply.

Mr. Hunton—Said that the licensed brokers at the Shipping Office get 5 per cent. on advances and eight annas per head for each man engaged or paid by the ship.

Captain McConnell—Said that he should like to see the C.-D. certificate system tried; and Captain Brebner having remarked that there ought to be a Marine Court where desertions could be summarily dealt with, he further stated that the Shipping Master and the Deputy Shipping Master,

Mr. Pirrie—Said that if section 4 of Act I of 1859 were fully carried out no further change would be necessary. He would like to see runners provided, whose business it would be to see men on Board, and, with the owners' consent, to prosecute deserters. If the C.-D. system were introduced at all, it should be made compulsory.

Captain Atkinson—Said that the runners would simply take the place of the ghât serangs, and if a man wished to desert he would pay the runner.

Mr. Wylie—Stated that if conviction inevitably followed a prosecution, desertion would soon stop. He thought that the courts were too prone to accept the excuses for a man neglecting to join a vessel.

Inspector Forsyth states.—I only know of two licensed brokers who work as such, viz, Gopal and Poorno. Gopal being Poorno's uncle; they are nominally two distinct brokers but as a matter of fact one. They employ 11 runners (called by them sircars) who do the work of both firms.

I have never seen Grish Chunder Ghose in the Shipping Office or on board ship. Apurnath is a man who assists in the Shipping Office, I think he is the nephew of Gopal, but he has no license.

Q.—Do you know anything of Ahmed Nazir?

A.—I have never seen a Mahomedan practising in the Shipping Office.

Q.—Is there not another man Ali, who has taken out a license three months ago?

A.—I have never seen him.

Q.—What opportunities have you of observing what goes on in the Shipping Office?

A.—I have been Inspector of River Police since 1877, and have often to go into the Shipping Office to investigate complaints against men from on board ship.

Q.—Are there any abuses in the manner in which seamen are engaged which in your opinion require to be remedied?

A.—I have observed that the following is what goes on in the Shipping Office:—

As the articles of agreement are placed before the Assistant Shipping Master the names are called out, the Assistant Shipping Master initials the names, and Gopal the licensed broker hands a sum of money to each man. Near him is a runner, who holds a bag into which the money is dropt as the men pass out. At night, in the quarter where the men reside, the runner goes to distribute the money, he does not pay it to the men themselves unless they have a wife and family, when he pays a part, but to the zemindar, who is generally the modi of the place. No man can be arrested unless the licensed broker chooses.

The agreements are drawn up by the licensed brokers, not by any one in the Shipping Office.

Q.—Is there anything to be gained by the licensed broker in getting crews paid off?

A.—The licensed broker gets eight annas a head for every crew.

Q.—Is it a fact that crews are discharged and re-shipped every time a vessel comes into port, notwithstanding the articles of agreement extending over six months?

A.—It is nearly always [illegible]

The lascar tells me that the serang deducts the money. The broker and the serang divide the sums deducted. The Maharani left on the 20th of last month, and I was on board in the morning. The crews were reported by the Baboo Apurno to be on board, except two secunnies, but I afterwards learnt that when the ship had got to Hastings, and came to anchor to take in convicts, three men were put on board as substitutes; one died, one was sick. These two never worked, and the other was of very little use. There was a man named Pachoo shipped, but I afterwards learnt that he returned his advances to the broker. I was told by his relative that he returned his advances the next day. I went to the Shipping Office and told Apurno, who said, yes, he returned his advances the next day after he was shipped, and the broker then arranged with the serang that he was to bring some other man in his place. I asked Gopal if he would send some one to point out Panchoo's house. He sent one of his runners, who pointed out Panchoo's mother-in-law's house. He then took away my man to Khalaseetolah, and he shewed him a prostitute's house, he told the man that Panchoo came there; that it was an opium den; and that he could be arrested there.

The brokers do not send the men's clothes on board; each man brings his own clothes.

Mr. Turner—Suggests that a man who has a C.-D. certificate should get a higher pay.

Mr. Darashaw Ruttonjee Chickgur, Licensed Shipping Broker of Bombay, read the following paper, giving the result of his enquiries into the ghât serang system in Calcutta—

"Serangs have too much power in this province.

The lascar is a tool in the hands of the ghât serangs, through whom all the currupt practices are carried out. The serangs and ghât serangs have entire control in the shipping and discharging in Calcutta.

The serang collects the men, and the selection rests with him. He determines the ability and merit of each man according to the tax he could levy on them.

[illegible] in the Shipping Office; some of well as ordinary seamen are reckoned in the same category, with an understanding that the serang will distribute and fix their pay according to their abilities. At time, to satisfy the Shipping Officer, different and distinct rates are given in the articles of agreement, with a promise, which is seldom fulfilled, to the good and able men, to give them a few rupees more out of the pay of the ordinary seamen and new men. This deprives the Shipping Office from discharging its main and first function of determining the pay of a seaman according to his worth.

The practice of giving advances to the men before a Shipping Master is a nominal one, as the money given by one hand is taken back by another, on pretext of securing the men. Here also the greatest function of the Shipping Office remains undischarged, and owing to this practice being carried out, not in exceptional cases, but wholesole, the safety and security of men revert into the hands of the ghât serangs and serangs, who are the most corrupt lot to be found here. After collecting back the whole of the advance, the serang proceeds with the ghât serang's or the broker's men to distribute the same. Here, the calculating serang tries to collect the black-mail he promised to pay to the ghât serangs by deducting such amount from the advance of each man as his mature judgment and conscience would dictate at the time.

The men knowing full well that they are entirely at the mercy of the serang, accept the terms set before them, and receive such sums as are apportioned to them, cursing the ghât serangs and serangs at the same time. They would certainly open their mouth and try to lay the complaint before an official, but they know full well that the ghât serangs are an unscrupulous lot of men, and have the full control in the management of shipping. The serang again armed with these powers, is a terror to the men at sea, and unfortunately if any men were at variance with him, or would not yield to the terms proposed by him, he would bring such force and coercion into use as to make them run away at an intermediate port, leaving behind their full-earned wages.

The seaman, after receiving the highly discounted advance, thinks over his miserable lot as to the payment of his debt on shore, as well as for his equipment for the voyage. Finding it impossible to accept the terms, a day or two after he goes to the serang and refunds the money advanced to him, or at times tries to decieve the sharks who fleece him by running away and accepting a shore appointment for a time. The serang on receiving back the advance, enters into a contract with another man who never set his foot in the Shipping Office, and who had seen very little of the sea before, by fixing a higher rate of black-mail on the man. Hence I account for wholesale changes in the crew which takes place without the knowledge of the parties concerned. I must that the same time assert that this loose system of allowing these constant changes in the crew corrupts the men so much that desertion and the practice of refunding advances become very common with them; and after a time the men believe that they can with impunity set at naught the agreement entered into at any time and for any frivolous reason.

There are also various other reasons for desertions which I need not mention here at full length, such as the bad name of a ship, short issue of provisions, &c.

The power of serangs to select and to determine and fix the pay of the men out of the average amount left at their disposal by the shipowners and ghât serangs does the greatest amount of mischief, as by it they try to underpay the good men and take such new men as would be willing to proceed on a voyage on a very low rate of wages, so as to allow a good surplus and margin left to them at the end of voyage. Hence the wretched crews; no emulation or ambition to men to rise in the scale of seamanship; no energy or heart to work for bettering the condition. The surplus left between the average pay given by the owner and the wages fixed by the serangs, by a common understanding amongst themselves, goes into the pockets of these wretched people, and the owners in the bargain secures the worst possible crews for their ships. The owners in the meanwhile consider themselves fortunate in getting their work done by a cheap ghât serang system, little imagining how inefficiently their ships are manned, and how the ghât serangs obtain a very large sum of money in an indirect way from the wages of according to their former understanding. To cure this evil to a certain extent, Messrs. Brebner and Walker have made a rule while paying off a Calcutta crew to pay the serang last, and not to allow him to move from the pay-table, in the meanwhile each man receives his arrears of wages, signs the release, and clears out from the Shipping Office. The serang is made to leave the office a long while after the whole crew is paid. Once the men are in possession of their cash, they are free agents, and no amount of coercion on shore will bring them round to carry out their nefarious contract with the serang. At sea, the Simon Pure serang blames the ghât serang before his officers for supplying an inefficient lot, and thus tries to clear himself.

A ghât serang at Calcutta appealed to me to consider whether the paltry commission and the pay he gets could ever pay him to discharge his functions fully and honestly. Besides he told me that at Calcutta there are so many ghât serangs and brokers that they each try to beg for more work at a so-called cheap rate, and try to defy one another. By this division, he tells me, desertions are very rampant, and the men themselves say that if they desert from one party, another is ready to employ them.

I endorse this view fully from my own experience. Men are prone to impose upon you when they see that there are more places than one for engaging themselves, and it is a great source of encouragement to them to draw advance, and go loafing from one place to another. In this particular matter, although I am an interested party, I would give my free opinion to recommend a monopoly to the licensed shipping brokers at a fixed rate of commission under a careful and strict supervision of a Shipping Master. By it in the long run perfect security and protection to the men and to owners, as well as an efficient and able staff of seamen, will be secured. Before promising this, I must state that the brokers should be members of a good stock and of well-known and exceptionable respectability, and should have head for organizing and controlling a large body of men Such brokers can at once command respect and confidence of the men, and in cases of emergencies the men would come forward at a word of command, even at the dead of night. Without blowing my own trumpet, I can place an instance out of many of my own before the Committee.

When the Mahomedan riot broke out at Bombay some years ago against the Parsees, I was freely allowed to go and was escorted into the Mahomedan streets by my Mahomodan seamen, and thus every confidence and cordiality were shewn me even by the Negroes and Arab barbarians. This I believe was the result of the force of character impressed on their minds by continuous fair and impartial dealings with them.

A very great tax is also levied by the firemen serangs on his men, and it has become so common amongst them that every man understands that it has the sanction of the law of the land. The new men have to pay a full tax, as they cannot enter the service without it, and they are the main source of replenishing the tax funds to be set aside by the serang for payment to parties who put him in power. The creating of many new serangs and promoting firemen and others to this post bring in a fresh supply of large funds to such who have a hand in it. This is done in the face of having twenty good serangs loafing in the port and amongst whom there may be some at the time who were promoted and taken on by the same company's steamers fifteen times over, and carried good discharge certificates. By this process many efficient persons loaf about without having anything to do, and hence a bid for higher sums to ghât serangs for even small posts. Such men when employed have no heart in the work, as they pay heavily for it. The workman therefore naturally degenerates in time and becomes apathetic. Added to this, the work of the new men mostly devolves on these people, and they get perfectly helpless, and hence a cry that we cannot get men of the old stamp. All this is a dead loss to the owners, who have to pay indirectly for the heavy wear and tear, and for an increased consumption of coal. An intelligent and conscientious stoker is the best saving-machine of coal, &c., who supplies the fresh fuel just when and where it is wanted; and a skilled stoker, instead of pitching his coal in any how, cramming his firehole, and then sitting down to sleep or smoke, feeds little and often, and deftly sprinkles the contents of his shovel just

The continuous Bombay discharge certificate form should be adopted by an enactment of the Government, wherein the safety of both men, brokers and shipowners will be combined, as by it no Commander of a vessel or a serang could bring a charge against the ability of a sea-going man, as his previous services, marked on it, will speak for themselves. The pay of the man will be quoted on the margin, and any body could judge whether the certified seamen is worth that money. The owners will then get the worth of their money and the men their full earned wages. The Captain and Engineer, who has to depend upon the serang's word for the man being a good or bad workman, will judge for himself, and employ such men as he would prefer. The men in the long run will become independent, and the ghât serangs and serangs will have to go in search of them instead of these men accepting any of their terms as they do now. Each man will have his grade and rank and earn such wages as he could lay claim to according to his ability. His progress will become evident from this certificate, and he will rise or fall according his own deserts.

The shipowners, against any mishap to the ships, will be in a position to prove by these certificates to the satisfaction of the Insurance Company that they had an efficient crew. To the honest brokers, it will be a perpetual safeguard against the accusation of changing crews, &c., as by it they will be in a position to prove their innocence. The adoption of this will no doubt be a death-blow to the ghât serangs, serangs, and to the low boarding-house-keeper. The last of these agencies should be gradually wiped off by the establishing a seamen's home out of their own money as I have succeeded in having them at Bombay. The evil of these low-class boarding-houses is very great, as it keeps the seamen in perpetual indebtedness to these sharks, whose debt could not be got rid of even after paying cent per cent interest.

I would not recommend allotment tickets to the families of seamen, as courtezans, boarding-house keepers, and such other friends of ill-repute will immediately step in as the wives, daughters, and brothers of these men, and would entice the seamen to remain as much as possible in their own company.

For the benefit of all the shipowners I would recommend them to issue strict instructions to their Officers and Engineers, that so long as good, certified serangs and tindels can be obtained in harbour, on no account should another man be promoted to those offices, as its evils are too numerous, and totally against their interest.

Besides putting the seamen in the way of building houses for themselves to give them shelter, in conjunction with the shipping master I have been able in Bombay to start a benevolent fund for sick and distressed lascars and firemen who get enfeebled in the service, and who become unserviceable by accident, &c. These distressed men are helped by us from the funds up to this day, and I believe Rs. 2,000 is now to the credit of that fund in the Hong-Kong bank.

As a last remedical measure, I would recommend, in conjunction with a good broker-system, to appoint for a temporary period a separate tribunal for trying native seamen's cases only for desertion and leaving the ships without leave. The Port Officer at Calcutta would be the best gentleman. This will have a wholesome effect after fifty or sixty such trials, which will set terror in the hearts of these men and would go a great way towards organizing a good system. As at present, much valuable time of the Commanders and brokers is lost in prosecuting men in the police courts, and therefore the total abandonment of this practice."

Captain H. de Smidt, who attended the meeting on behalf of Messrs. Apcar and Co., brought to notice the difference between the circumstance of Calcutta and Bombay. Owing to the situation of the latter port on the sea coast, there was always a class of sea-faring men to be found, whereas in Calcutta, it was necessary to seek out the men, and often they had to be taken from the fields. It frequently happened that after a crew had started it was found that many of the men engaged had never been to sea; men of this class were designated 'dandies,' and were not of much use on board for two or three years. He was not in favour of doing away with licensed brokers and Captain Ashdown, Commander of the S. S. Siam, Peninsula and Oriental Company, expressed himself generally to the effect that the present system required to be reformed both in the interests of the lascars themselves and of the shipping companies. He approved of the Bombay system of continuous discharge certificates, and also of the suggestion that the payment of advances should be personally superintended by the Shipping Master.

IN inviting your consideration of the accompanying papers on the existing system of engaging native seamen in the Port of Calcutta, I have the honour, on behalf of the Committee which I represent, to request that you will favour the Committee with the names and addresses of those gentlemen, who, from their intimate knowledge of the working of the present system of engaging lascars, will be able to afford the Committee useful information on the subject, especially including also those officers in your employment who have had some practical reference of the working of the continuous-discharge system in Bombay.

2. The Committee propose to hold their next meeting at 3 P.M. on Friday, the 25th instant, at the office of the Board of Revenue, 2, Bankshall Street, and will feel much obliged if you can arrange that some of the gentlemen referred to shall be present to afford them such information as they may be able to give.

3. I am further desired to invite an expression of your own opinion on the whole question.

No. 54, dated Calcutta, the 24th January 1884.

From—MESSRS. APCAR AND Co.,

To—The President of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen.

IN reply to your letter of 20th instant, requesting our consideration of the accompanying papers on the existing system of engaging native seamen, and also for the names and addresses of the gentlemen in our employ acquainted with the present system of engaging native seamen, we would beg to refer you to Captain H. de Smidt, who has employed native lascars in our service for many years. With regard to the papers submitted, we agree with the remarks of the Deputy and Assistant Shipping Masters in the extract from a letter No. 717B, from A. Forbes, Esq.; and we are further of opinion that the introduction of the continuous-discharge system followed at the Bombay Shipping Office, in Calcutta, would be of great benefit. We are also of opinion that the measures which the Committee think would go far to correct some of the worse evils of the present system, numbered 1, 2, and 3, would result in the detention of the steamer when on the point of sailing.

Dated Calcutta, the 24th January 1884.

From—The Superintendent, Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company,

To—The President of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen, Calcutta.

I HAVE the honour to own receipt of your letter of the 20th January, handing me a Government resolution appointing a Committee to enquire into the abuses arising out of the present system of engaging native seamen, and asking me to express an opinion on the subject, as well as to arrange that some officers in the Company's service may be present at the meeting to be held to-morrow afternoon at the Board of Revenue, 2, Bankshall Street.

It is scarcely necessary for me to say that, with our entire fleet, manned by native sailors, all questions affecting them are of the greatest interest and importance to this Company, and had the communication been made when your Committee was appointed twelve months ago, some useful information would have been furnished, but this cannot be done at a few days' notice.

There is no doubt that the system in force at Bombay has advantages not possessed by that of Calcutta, but at the same time the former is also capable of improvement, and I should therefore wish to obtain some information from that port before expressing an opinion. I should also wish to consult some of the Company's senior Commanders who have had exceptional opportunities for understanding all questions relating to Indian seamen.

No. 1088, dated Calcutta, the 23rd January 1884.

From—J. HUNTON, Esq., Assistant Shipping Master,

To—The President of the Committee to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen, Calcutta.

As requested I beg leave to submit the enclosed for your perusal, and remain, &c.

Bombay continuous forms of discharge.

IT would clearly show the character and ability of the seaman in the different ships on which he had served, and become a valuable document to him in time, especially if endorsed "very good" for both conduct and ability; if otherwise, he would destroy it, and after a time apply for renewal. It would, to a certain extent, check desertions and substitutes, but not entirely (as to be seen hereafter) it would not check the present system of black-mail imposed on them by serangs, boarding-house-keepers, crimps, and money-lenders (not the licensed brokers as supposed). However, I am in favour of the Bombay certificate, as it would be a boon to the steady class of seamen, but not in the majority, as they avoid shipping so long as they can obtain means by borrowing at a high rate of interest, thereby putting themselves entirely into the hands of the above-named sharks.

It is a known fact that hundreds of lascars obtain daily employment for harbour work, such as boats, stevedores' gangs, &c., besides a vast number is admitted monthly in the Government docks, Port Commissioners' private docks, railways, on river steamers and flats, tugs, various mills, and other sources; in fact, the Calcutta lascar can turn his hand to many ways of earning his living independent of shipping. I have frequently seen them driving ticca garries and cow carts. Here, I would ask what value his discharge certificate would be. Another very large opening is the home trade when crews are enganged independent of the Shipping Office, for instance the British India steamers and others, who from January to December 1883 shipped 2,535 men. I may here mention that the British Indian Steam Navigation Company do not employ licensed brokers; they have their own servants, termed ghât serangs, who receive a small monthly salary and 2½ per cent. on all advances made to the crew—being half of the amount allowed to licensed brokers.

The seafaring class of Calcutta are scattered all over the town and its suburbs. The following are the principal places where they reside:—

Machooa Bazar, Mirzapore, Narcoldangah, Bytokhanna, Entally, Koriah, Teeljalla, Taltolla, Jaun Bazar, Mullunga, Sat Bazar, Bhowanipore, Khidderpore, Cooly Bazar, Monipoor, Hurrobash, Dhacooriah, Garden Reach, Rajgunge, Howrah, Sulkeah, and their adjoining places, extending over four or five miles; and different class of men shipped are from—

Chittagong, Sylhet, Sundeep, Dacca, Moorshedabad, Bamnee, Furidpore, Cuttack, Burdwan, Pundooah, Midnapore, Hooghly, Howrah, Calcutta, Rajgunge, Jiddiah, Zanzibar, Muscat, Maldive, Lacadive, Aden, Mauritius, Malta, Port Said, Singapore, Manilla, Penang, Java, China, Bombay, Goa, Nagire, Bushire, Baghdad, and Bussorah.

Whereas in Bombay there are only four or five class of men, viz., Suratees, Goanese, Rutnagirees, Goges, Devas and Damainias. Each sect reside in separate moholas or quarters, and can easily be got when wanted. Furthermore, as a rule, when a ship requires a crew, all of one sect, or nearly so, will ship together.

The Bombay seamen are generally more quite, better caste, and of less dissipated habits than those of Calcutta, who have contracted vices from their frequent visits to Europe, as the majority of them are a very low class.

For the year 1882-83 the following is the number of men discharged and shipped through the native department only—

Duties of Licensed Shipping Brokers.

After receiving an order to ship a native crew, the broker or agent notifies at the different quarters where the seafaring men reside, that a ship or a steamer—naming such vessel—is bound for such a port, as the case may be, requiring so many men for a term of so many months; will sign articles of agreement, say to-morrow or the day after, either on board or in the Shipping Office, as the case may be.

The licensed broker will wait at the Shipping Office at the appointed day and hour for the captain and crew, and when both are present, the captain selects a serang; the broker then asks the Master who will select the crew, his officer or the serang, or he himself: in nearly all cases the serang has to select the crew.

The broker then enters them on the articles of agreement; then arranges them before the Shipping Master, and reads the agreement to them, explaining the nature of the voyage, the scale of provision, the time when they are to be on board, &c., then each man is called by his

Sometimes great difficulties are experienced in getting a crew for a ship or a steamer from the following causes:—

(1st) ship having a bad name, that is troublesome officers, who are hard on their crews; (2nd) ships which do not observe the port customs regarding their working hours; (3rd) ships which are under-manned—from such ships many men after signing articles, and receiving advance fail to join—in such cases brokers are compelled to obtain substitutes at the last moment, and give a further advance to get the men on board in time for the vessel to leave at day-light.

After the crews have signed, the sircars or assistants of the brokers follow the lascars to their houses, and pay advances into their hands or that of their relations, who stand security for the amount; in cases of the men having no relation, their landlord or boarding-house-keeper becomes security, the advance is paid to the man, who in all instances pays the same over to his security. During this interval—between shipping and vessel clearing—if any report of sickness, death or hiding-away from the security is known to the broker, he at once informs the Masters or Officer of the vessel, who approves of other men in lieu of the above, and the broker ships them on the articles, if time admits, before the Shipping Master, and a further advance is given by him, taking his chance of recovering the first advance from the security.

Twenty-four hours before the time fixed for joining the vessel the brokers, assistants and runners go to every individual member of the crew, and ask and receive their clothes, chests, and bags, which they intend to carry with them on the vessel, for shipment. If any of the crew refuse to deliver, or make false excuses in dilivering their clothes, chests, &c., the man is reported to the broker, who takes special care to watch the movement of the man and ship him on board with or without the assistance of the police.

In some cases men who are determined not to join will deliver a chest of rags, &c., without a murmer so as not to arouse any suspicion. The night previous to the vessel's sailing the broker and his assistants, according to usual practice, call at the house of each man, and ask them to join their vessel according to the terms of their agreement; and as the lascars do not live together in one place, but scattered all over Calcutta and suburbs, the broker or his assisstant cannot wait long upon on man, but has to run in quest of others and afterwards he goes on board the vessel to see that all are on board. Very early the next morning the crews are mustered, and in some cases all on board, and in others a few are wanting, when the broker or his assistants takes the names of those who have not joined, and hasten to the place where they reside, and if found, take them on board; and in the case of defaulters take substitutes in their place. It will thus be seen that the broker and his assistants are of necessity a class of men we cannot do without, who frequently have to work the whole night previous to the vessel's leaving, and at considerable expense for further advances, garry and dinghy hire, or vessels would be detained.

There are five native licensed brokers, as follows:—

Hindus.—Grish Chunder Ghose, who has held a license from the formation of the Shipping Office, but for the last twelve years he has not worked; he simply retains his license to enable him to act for his son in case of illness.

Poorno Chunder Ghose, son of the above, has held a license for the last 13 years.

Gopal Chunder Ghose, brother of Grish Chunder Ghose, has held a license for about 18 years.

Mahomedans.—Ahmed Nassir has held a license for about 20 years.

Ali has held a license for about 3 years.

I have been 10 years working in the native department, during which not one official complaint has been made to me of any extortion on their part, and I have always found them a useful, willing class of men, thoroughly acquainted with their work, especially the Hindu brokers, who render great assistance in this department.

License Brokers' Charges.

I BELIEVE the broker's commission was 10 per cent. formerly, when the Government, about the year 1859, reduced it to 5 per cent., at which the brokers petitioned and proved that 5 per cent. would not compensate them for the trouble and expense they incurred, in fact the 5 per cent. paid to brokers is an insurance against the loss of advances, &c., from the desertion of any member or members of native crew. The reply to their petition was that and extra allowance of eight annas per man was allowed to cover the expenses of cart and dinghy hire for putting the crew's chest and bedding, also dinghy hire for the men going on board.

The following was received from the Shipping Office, but no signature was attached to it:—

W. H. G.

I am of opinion that the runner system would not act, as the advances paid to lascars [illegible] To whom them will the Owners or Agents look for the recovery of change is necessary, as the present staff of licensed brokers are men of substance, and as respectable as could be got to undertake the duty required. Furthermore, we have a deposit of Rs. 1,000 each as security for the fulfilment of their duty. I again say paid runners would not take the keen interest that licensed brokers are compelled to do to protect themselves: the runner would not undertake to pay advances to substitutes from his own pocket, or incur expenses for garry and dinghy hire, which is a considerable item, especially at night, being nearly double, which if not readily done would lead to the vessel being detained, and to greater complaints.

A trial was made by the late Captain Currie (First Registrar of Merchant Seamen, in the year 1851) to introduce runners instead of brokers (who were called ghât serangs) and after a trial of six months the attempt was abandoned.

Brokers are paid 5 per cent. on the advances made to seamen; and from my long experience I know out of which 2½ per cent. they allow to their runners for procuring the crew and defraying expenses for going about to obtain the necessary security for each man before paying the advance to him and from the remaining 2½ per cent. the broker has to meet the loss of advances, &c., from desertion, and for their own support. It is therefore plainly to be seen that the brokers cannot afford to bear the expenses of arresting fees, &c.; the eight annas allowed as shipping charges barely leave anything after defraying the expenses of cart and dinghy hire for the lascar's traps, and again putting the men on board (frequently at Garden Reach) the night previous to the vessel's leaving. In some cases the expense exceeds what they get, but taking the average it covers all.

It would be impossible for the brokers to prosecute all cases of desertion, which often occur for the following reasons:—

1. A Chittagong man or a Malay deserts after obtaining his advance and proceeds to Chittagong or to Burmah, cheating his security and leaving the broker to recover the advance the best way he can from the security, which is generally by instalments.

2. After desertion secreting himself for a time to avoid detection, and then taking service in a home-trade vessel and the many other sources ready to give him employment, quite independent and unknown to the Shipping Office. Furthermore, the brokers cannot afford time and expense to hunt up deserters after the vessel has left, as he has other vessels on hand requiring his attention. He could in all cases of desertion furnish their names and place of abode to the police, and they could arrest them, and the broker could be made to identify and prove the men to have deserted (which is readily done by the police in the case of an European seaman deserting, and the Agents or Master prosecute and pay Rs. 6 arresting fee for each man; not so with the case of native seaman, no one would pay the arresting fee or give himself the time and trouble to prosecute. Furthermore, Police Inspectors are allowed a fee of Rs. 6 for each European seaman they arrest, which is readily done and fee paid in the case of European deserters, from the fact that European seaman has wages due to him from which the fees can be recovered. Not so the native seaman, he has nothing due to him but in debt to the broker for the advance he has received, therefore the Police Inspector will not move to arrest without knowing who is to pay his fee. The Agents will not run the risk of losing money seeing no prospect of recovering it again, and all they look for is the refund of advance. It therefore cannot be expected that the broker can bear the loss from 2½ per cent. which altogether would not cover the amount of police fees, &c.

It would be a great check if the Shipping Master and his Deputy were invested with the powers of a Marine Magistrate, as cases could be summarliy tried and dealt with as the men were caught, and would tend to strengthen and uphold the Shipping Office.

From the above statement it will plainly be seen that the licensed broker is a middle-man, who takes the responsibility of refunding advances and keeping a staff of runners to do the necessary work of seeing the crew on board as the Act provides.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that my steamer leaves port to-morrow, the 29th instant, so that I shall not be able to attend the meeting to be held on Friday next.

I have therefore taken the liberty of forwarding you a clipping from the Indian Daily News of Saturday last, the 26th instant. It is, I think, good proof of the necessity of investing both the Shipping and Deputy Shipping Master, as at Singapore, with magisterial powers.

It is a clear case of receiving advance and desertion, but for the want of a prosecutor the man goes scot-free, with liberty to swindle some one else.

It was, I think, frankly admitted at the last meeting that under the present system Agents and Owners would not prosecute, as doing so entailed a loss of some six rupees, besides attendance at a Police Court.

CHEATING AND DESERTION.—Robert Watson, an inmate of the Government Almshouse' was charged in two cases; in the first with cheating in respect of Rs. 10, and in the second with having deserted from the B. S. Bruce, he being an articled seaman.

Mr. McGuire, who was the prosecutor in the first case, informed his Worship that on the 30th November last accused was declared a vagrant by Mr. Gupta, and had since been an inmate of the home.

At first he was desirous of enlisting himself as a soldier, but changed his mind, he wished to ship himself and leave the country. On that Mr. McGuire called at the Shipping Office and spoke to the Agents of the above ship on his behalf, one of whom came over to the home and saw the accused, after which he promised to do something for him. A few days after the accused was sent for, and, having signed the articles, an advance of Rs. 17 out of Rs. 30, his salary, was made to him. Then, in consequence of the accused's representations, Mr. McGuire placed him before the Committee and obtained for him Rs. 10 from the Vagrants' Fund to enable him to purchase clothes for the voyage. The clothes were accordingly brought, and the accused then went on board, but somehow or other on the ship leaving, he disappeared, and was not seen or heard off till the night before last, when Mr. McGuire arrested him in a grog-shop.

To questions put by the Court, Mr. McGuire said that the Rs. 10 was given as a present to the accused.

His Worship observed that no cheating had been committed, and dismissed the first case; the second was also dimissed for want of prosecution.

From—The Superintendent, Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company,
To—W. H. GRIMLEY, ESQ., C.S., President of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen, Calcutta.

REFERRING to your letter of 20th January, and to my reply, I have now the honour to state, with reference to the Government Resolution of 15th February 1883 (Marine), my opinion is that the practice followed at the Bombay Shipping Office, by which every seaman is expected to possess a continuous record note of the ships he has served on, might be adopted with advantage in Calcutta, as it is found to be a convenience to Owners and a benefit to good seamen.

On the subject of the engagement of native crews generally, the following remarks by Captain Newell, the Company's Dock Master in Bombay, may be of interest:—

"My intimate connection with this department for the last 25 years, engaging crews for the Company's ships, has afforded me ample opportunities of observing the great need of reform, and I have felt surprise that legislation has not long since provided relief to the native seamen against the oppression of the brokers and ghât serangs; and also enabled Owners to obtain better men for their money. The present system is simply a monopoly in the hands of the broker, Owners and Ship Masters being at his mercy. In Calcutta, this power appears to be much abused, but in Bombay it is checked a good deal by the register discharges and the vigilance of the Shipping Masters. The broker, however, has great power over all the seafaring men, who know that if they offend him they will be kept out of a ship. This enables him to produce such men as he thinks proper for shipping, and leaves no discretion to the Captain in selecting their crews. I have frequently heard officers say that if they did not approve of the gang produced by the broker, they might wait, and ultimately be saddled with a worse crew. I fully concur in the measures suggested by the Committee, but would further suggest that owners might be allowed to appoint their own broker who should be registered at the Shipping Office and licensed so long as the owner wished to retain his services. I consider also that the register discharges should be handed to the Captain on the men being selected, and the men indentified by these documents when put on board by the broker. A system of advances to the famalies could be arranged during the long absence of the men, and with this freedom from the power of the broker, good seamen, firemen, &c., could readily be procured, and they would only be too glad to continue in the employ of large Companies like the P. and O. and others, where they are well fed and cared for."

Should your Committee be sitting again within the next seven or eight days, Captain Adamson of the S. S. Deccan would be happy to attend and answer any questions on the subject of native crews, on receiving timely notice.

READ—

A Report, dated 10th July 1884, from Mr. W. H. Grimley, President of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen in Calcutta.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce, when commenting on the provisions of a Bill for the amendment of the Merchant Shipping Act, brought to the notice of the Government the defects in the present system of engaging lascar crews in Calcutta, and suggested several remedial measures, among which was the introduction into Calcutta of the "continuous discharge" system which is in force at Bombay. The Lieutenant-Governor consulted the Board of Revenue and other authorities concerning the Chamber's remarks; but the subject proved to be one of considerable difficulty, and called for special enquiry at the hands of persons specially conversant with it. Accordingly, Sir Rivers Thompson appointed a small Committee, in February 1883, to inquire into, and report on, the subject. Owing, however, to the absence of some of the members and other circumstances, a delay occurred, and the Committee, as originally constituted, was modified. The final composition of the Committee, was as follows:—Mr. W. H. Grimley, C.S., President, and Mr. H. B. H. Turner, Captain Brebner (the Shipping Master of Calcutta), and Mr. A. D. Larymore, Members. The Committee sat during January and February 1884. They examined a number of witnesses, and also made enquiries of shipping firms, captain, and other persons interested in, and acquainted with, the subject. They have submitted a full and well-considered report, and the Lieutenant-Governor thanks them for the care they have bestowed on this question of public interest.

2. Under Act I of 1859, section 4, it is the business of the Shipping Office to superintend and facilitate the engagement and discharge of seamen, and provide means for securing the presence on board at the proper times of the men engaged. In these operations the Shipping Office, with its limited staff, is unable to deal with the crews directly, and calls to its aid certain middlemen who are called licensed shipping brokers. At present these brokers are four in number. They have given security and obtained a license, and as their remuneration they receive 5 per cent. on advances, and eight annas per head for each man engaged or paid by the ship. Each broker has in his employ a number of assistants who are called sircars or runners.

3. The present system of engaging native crews in Calcutta is this. On receiving information of the wants of a ship, the brokers collect a number of serangs and lascars either at the Shipping Office or on board. The serang is first selected and then the crew; but in most cases the selection of the crew is left to the serang. The conditions of the agreement are made known to the crew, and an advance is given to each man by the broker, who is provided with the necessary funds. The payment of the advance at this stage, nowever, is a mere form, for the broker takes it back, after the articles are signed, in order to keep a hold over the men. His sircars afterwards visit each man at his home, and pay over the advance to the lascar's relatives or the boarding-house keepers who stand security for him. Twenty-four hours before the time fixed for joining the vessel, the sircars go round to the men and take their clothes, &c., to be conveyed on board. If the lascar evinces any disinclination, the broker takes special care to ship him on board, with the aid of the police, if necessary. This method prevails in almost all the Shipping Agencies, with the exception of the British India Steam Navigation Company, who have numerous vessels constantly visiting the port, and who employ their own paid ghât serangs to procure the crews. The discharge takes place either at the Shipping Office or on board the vessel and remains the proper time of the crew engaged. For these defects the Chamber of Commerce hold the brokers responsible, charging them with despotic treatment and yet ineffective control over the lascars, and with corrupt interference with the lascars' wages. The Committee's enquiries, however, do not altogether substantiate these allegations. The lascars come from various parts of India and other countries; they do not live in one place, but are scattered about all over Calcutta and the Suburbs; and there are many avenues to employment open to them both in the port and in the places of business and manufacture in the town. All this tends to weaken the hold which the brokers might otherwise have on the lascars, and while the control exercised by the former is undoubtedly ineffective, it is very unlikely that they are able to treat the lascars in the high-handed way that has been supposed.

5. According to the Committee, the person who exercises undoubted authority over the lascars is the ship's serang. His voice is potential in the selection of the crew, and he is their spokesman at the time of the engagement. As he leads, so they implicitly follow. His influence is attributed to the observance of custom and the feeling of clanship that characterize all relations in this country, while it is undeniably to the lascars' advantage to stand well with the serang when on board, even at some expense to their pockets. He thus establishes various claims against each lascar, and it is in order to adjust these that the pay of the whole crew passes into his hands at the time of discharge. This practice is not, it seems, considered a grievance by the lascars, but they accept it as a customary transaction.

6. In fact, it would even appear that the rate of pay which the lascar really receives does not follow the terms of the agreement, but is arranged between him and the serang. Out of the sum so bargained for, the lascar has to meet the claims of the boarding-house keepers, the surety, and the broker's men, besides providing for his family, and it is upon the adequacy of the wages to meet all these demands that his attendance on board or his desertion depends. These bargains and demands constitute a serious burden, and are the cause that the desertion of engaged lascars and the supply of substitutes is a matter of such constant occurrence and complaint. Until the position of the lascar is ameliorated, there appears to be no way of checking the practice of giving substitutes. The only deterrent at present is the fear of prosecution, and this is but a weak one; for the broker cannot prosecute a deserter without authority from the ship's officers or the shipping firm, and the trouble incurred, and the loss of time and money, dissuade all parties from adopting stringent measures as long as a substitute has been supplied. It happens, besides, that the fact of desertion is often concealed by a practice among the serangs of providing substitutes and making them answer to the names of the absentees. This practice also defrauds the Shipping Office of its fees. These remarks, however, fully apply to individual cases of desertion alone, for the Committee have found that the cases of desertion en masse, to which reference was made by the Chamber of Commerce, are special, and, as a rule, occur only in the cases of the British India Steam Navigation and Asiatic Steam Navigation Companies, which have running agreements with their crews for six months, but pay them up their full wages on the return of the vessel to Calcutta, in order to close the vessel's accounts for the voyage. It is scarcely a matter of surprise that the crews having obtained their pay and leave from the ship should sometimes fail to rejoin. Fees have, of course, to be paid in such cases upon the re-engagement of a crew, and gratifications go to all those whose claims the lascar has learnt to recognize. Here, however, it seems to the Lieutenant-Governor that the remedy lies in the hands of the Companies themselves, and if they retain their present procedure, it must be because the advantages more than counterbalance the disadvantages. Excluding all cases of substitution and failures of crews to rejoin, the desertions of individual lascars under advance are estimated not to exceed 7 per cent. of the engagements.

7. The evils of the present system therefore lie not so much in the fact [illegible] from their places are almost always filled up by substitutes.

the serang, and he has no assurance that the crew he will ultimately get will answer his expectations. To remedy these evils, the Chamber of Commerce have put forward four proposals, namely—

(1) The withdrawal of the brokers' licenses ;
(2) The payment of advances, not in cash, but by advance notes payable on the sailing of the vessel with the lascar on board ;
(3) The reorgainzation of the Shipping Office upon the English model ; and
(4) The adoption of the Bombay plan of "continuous discharges."

8. The practice in England is that the master requiring a crew goes to the Shipping Office, having previously made an appointment ; seamen wanting a vessel go to the same place, and there are always plenty of men available. The master makes his selection, the terms are agreed upon, the fees paid, and the articles signed. An assistant of the Shipping Master, called a "runner," takes down each man's name and address, and at the time of sailing proceeds on board, musters the crew, and provides substitutes for absentees from among men who accompany him for that purpose. After the vessel has sailed, the runner waits upon the owner of the ship and prosecutes the absentees if so desired. It is stated that the certainty of prosecution and conviction is the chief safeguard against desertion.

9. This system does not differ very materially from that obtaining in Calcutta, except that the broker is eliminated. In England seamen's quarters are generally in the neighbourhood of the shipping, and the men look out for work independently of one another. In Calcutta, however, the circumstances, as already noticed, are quite the reverse. The Committee do not consider that the adoption of this system would secure any improvement, and the Lieutenant-Governor concurs with them. The broker can be made responsible for abuses detected. His elimination would merely distribute the responsibility among a large number of individuals of the class of the present sircars, over whom no effective control could be exercised. The Chamber's first proposal would therefore, it seems, entail either the introduction of the English system (which is their third proposal) or the replacement of the brokers by paid gnât serangs. The English system, as already remarked, is not adapted to the circumstances of Calcutta, and the third proposal is therefore unadvisable. The second of the above alternatives would not suit the needs of the majority of the shipping firms which, unlike Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie and Company, cannot provide constant employment for paid serangs, and would object to be deprived of the services of the licensed brokers ; while there would be less ground to expect probity among serangs who are a poorer and less educated class than the licensed brokers. The Committee are not prepared, therefore, to recommend the abolition of the brokers, and this conclusion appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to be a sound one. The second proposal is also rejected by the Committee as impracticable. They point out that the lascar could not get the note cashed except at a heavy discount, and they consider, rightly in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor, that he would be unwilling to engage on such terms.

10. The Bombay plan of "continuous discharges" is the last proposal that the Chamber advocates. Its chief features are thus described by the Committee—

When a native seaman is engaged, a certificate is filled in with particulars which are carefully ascertained in the Shipping Office, of his age, height, and the marks on his person. The reverse of the certificate contains columns for showing the name of the ship, the dates of engagement and discharge, the character of the man as certified in the ship's log, &c. After the man's measure has been taken, and the distinguishing marks on his body ascertained, and these particulars have been noted in the certificate, the licensed shipping broker, who is in attendance, pays the advance, having previously warned the man that the serang has nothing to do with his wages in any way, and that it is not to the serang to whom he will in the future be indebted for a ship, but to his own discharge certificate, which will regulate his promotion or degradation, and any increase or reduction of wages consequent

On the arrival of the vessel at the port of discharge, all the tin boxes containing the certificates are taken to the Shipping Office, together with the official log-book; and a clerk takes each certificate and fills in the particulars on its reverse, of the service, name of ship, character, &c., and these entries are signed by the master of the vessel and the Shipping Master. The like entries are made in the office register. The clerk then rolls up and returns the document to its proper case indicated by its number on the lid, and calls each man and hands his discharge to him, after which the man receives his wages in the presence of the Shipping Master and goes about his business.

If any lascar is found to have tampered with his certificate, it is taken from him and kept in the Shipping Office until he confesses, and he is then furnished with a fresh certificate, with all the particulars corrected and authenticated, for which he has to pay eight annas, which is the charge made in the first instance. The death of any lascar afloat causes the document to be cancelled by writing across it the fact and the date.

There is space on the reverse of the certificate for many entries of discharge, and when all this is filled up, the seaman can obtain what is called a second issue certificate. The face of this second issue gives an analysis of the characters entered on the first issue. This analysis is entered in a "register of second issues" which is kept up in the Shipping Office.

These certificates, after the possessor has made a few voyages, show the exact worth of a man on board. If they show invariably a good discharge, he is engaged without reference to the serang or any other person, but if there is any falling off in ability or conduct, the offer of reduced wages is the inevitable result.

The system has been in force in Bombay for about nine years, and has proved a complete success. The serang is shipped, and each seaman shows his certificate and is rated accordingly, his promotion and wages depending solely on his merits as recorded on his certificate.

11. This system clearly possesses numerous advantages over that in force at Calcutta. Under it a man with a good discharge can be sure of finding employment, and become practically independent of the licensed broker and ghât serang. The loss of the certificate that will inevitably follow desertion, since it is kept on board, must diminish the number of absentees, and the careful record of each lascar's appearance must facilitate his arrest in the event of desertion. An objection was raised that the system was merely the revival of the old plan of register tickets which had proved inoperative both in England and India; but the Committee find from an examination of the history of the registry system that it was done away with solely from reasons connected with its working in the case of European sailors, and without any reference to native seamen; so that the argument that that system had failed in regard to lascars falls to the ground. The Committee recommend that the Bombay system should be tried in Calcutta.

12. The Committee have also made a number of valuable suggestions connected with the introduction and working of the system. They do not recommend that the practice, at the time of engagement, of each man's returning his advance to the broker should be absolutely forbidden; for the broker, being responsible to the ship's agent for the amount advanced, should be allowed to make the best arrangement he can to guard against loss. But they would absolutely discountenance and put down as far as possible the similar transaction that takes place at the time of discharge. The Committee would also insist on prosecutions being instituted in every case except on good cause shewn to the satisfaction of the Shipping Master; and in order to obviate the present difficulties and inconveniences, they recommend that the Shipping Master and his Deputy and Assistant should be vested with magisterial powers to dispose of cases of desertion summarily, and that the present high fee for arrest be abolished. Lastly, they recommend that the system of licensing boarding houses for native seamen should be re-enforced as a useful auxiliary to the continuous discharge system. After falling into temporary disuse, it was revived in 1880 with the object of checking the practice of giving substitutes; and for that end the keeper of the house was required to keep up a register regarding the native seamen admitted and their movements. The police were directed to inspect these registers, but their supervision, in the absence of materials for testing the registers, could effect no check. Such materials under the continuous discharge system will be found in the Shipping Office, and the Committee recommend that the scrutiny should be made there.

13. The Lieuteant-Governor generally concurs in the Committee's views, and is of opinion that the Bombay system should be introduced at Calcutta. It must, however, be introduced, as the Committee observe on the voluntary principle. Government cannot make it compulsory by enactment. It must be left to the good sense of the Shipping Companies to make the possession of a "continuous discharge" an indispensable condition of employment; and if they and the masters of vessels set a value on the certificate, the lasars will soon learn to do the same. Success will depend on the co-operation of the Companies. Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie and Company, who now employ their own ghât serangs, would be especially concerned with the change; but all Companies would need to forego the present practice of shipping and discharging crews on board. This practice has its conveniences; but unless it is relinquished and the shipment and discharge are conducted at the Shipping Office, it would be impossible, at the inception of the scheme, at least to carry out the details connected with the certificates. Afterwards, when the arrangements are in good working order, it might be possible to renew the concession in the cases of discharges. Sir Rivers Thompson is also willing to adopt the recommendations of the Committee regarding prosecutions, arrests, and the disposal of cases of desertion. Before, however, sanctioning any change, the Lieutenant-Governor would be glad if the Bengal Chamber of Commerce would consider the proposals and favour him with a report as to how far the Shipping Companies are willing to lend their assistance in giving the scheme a fair trial.

No. 652T—M, dated Darjeeling, the 20th June 1885.

From—E. N. BAKER, Esq., Offg. Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Municipal Department,

To—The Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

IN your letter dated the 19th April 1882, containing an expression of the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce on the provisions of the Bill for the amendment of the Merchant Shipping Act, certain remarks were offered for the consideration of Government in regard to the present system of engaging lascar crews in Calcutta. The suggestions of the Chamber in the matter having commended themselves to the Lieutenant-Governor, a Committee was appointed to consider and report on the whole question. I am now directed to forward, for the information of the Chamber, a copy of the Committee's report, together with a copy of a Resolution recorded by the Lieutenant-Governor thereon, and to request that the Lieutenant-Governor may be favoured with the opinion of the Chamber on the Committee's proposals. Sir Rivers Thompson would also wish to be informed how far the Shipping Companies would be willing to lend their assitance in giving a fair trial to the scheme recommended by the Committee.

Dated Calcutta, the 1st October 1885.

From—S. E. J. CLARKE, Esq, Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

I AM directed by my Committee, with reference to the communications from your office, noted in the margin, to state the conclusions they have come to after a careful consideration of the report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen in Calcutta.

No. 652T—M, dated 20th June 1885.

No. 316-652T—M, dated 2nd September 1885.

3. There are two recommendations of the Commission to which my Committee drew the special attention of the members of the Chamber interested in shipping, and on which they have had the benefit of those members' opinions. In the Chamber's letter of 19th April 1882, amongst other recommendations, was one proposing the introduction of the Bombay system of "continuous discharges." My Committee, while still urging the introduction of this system, are disposed to agree with the conclusion arrived at in paragraph 41 of the report of the Commission, and to suggest that "if the system be introduced, it must be on the voluntary principle, it being left to the good sense of the shipping company to make the possession of a 'continuous discharge' an indispensable condition of employment."

4. In connection with the engagement and discharge of seamen, my Committee would strongly deprecate any action on the conclusion set out in paragraph 42 of the report. To compel vessels, specially those engaged in the coasting trade, to invariably engage or discharge their crews at the Shipping Office would be to subject them to very great inconvenience, and to cause them not unfrequently to lose one or two days.

5. My Committee are of opinion that where the privilege of shipping or discharging a crew on board is made the subject of an application to the Shipping Office, it should be allowed.

6. The only other suggestion of the Committee which appears to call for remark, is that conveyed in paragraph 49 of their report. There is a consensus of opinion amongst those members of the Chamber who have been consulted on the subject, that it is in every way desirable that the Shipping Master, his Deputy, and his Assistant should be invested with magisterial powers to enable them to deal promptly with cases of desertion. Very great dissatisfaction exists as to the manner in which such cases are now disposed of by the Police Courts, and in supporting the recommendation of the Commission, my Committee are but repeating the suggestion put forward in the Chamber's letter to the Government of Bengal, dated 31st July 1883, and so far as the conferral of magisterial powers on the officers of the Shipping Office is concerned, my Committee trust that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor may find himself in a position to modify the opinion expressed in paragraph 5 of your office No. 4J—LT of 1st November 1883.

No. 2472, dated Calcutta, the 24th November 1885.

From—G. K. LYON, ESQ., Offg. Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal Municipal Department,

To—The Shipping Master, Calcutta.

I AM directed to forward herewith a copy of a report, dated the 10th July 1884, from Mr. W. H. Grimley, President of the Committee appointed to inquire into the system of engaging native seamen in Calcutta, together with the Resolution of this Government on the report. It will appear from paragraph 13 of the Resolution that it has been decided to introduce the Bombay system of "continuous discharges," but on the voluntary principle, and I am to request that you will be so good as to frame rules based on the suggestions of the Committee, and to submit a form of discharge certificates under section 43 of Act I of 1859 for the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor. I am also to request that you will take the other measures necessary for the introduction of the system of "continuous discharges," and to submit a report on the subject.

2. I am at the same time desired to forward to you a copy of a letter, dated the 1st October last, from the Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, stating the conclusions which the Committee of the Chamber have come to after a consideration of the report of the Committee appointed to inquire into the system of engaging native seamen in Calcutta. With reference to paragraphs 4 and 5 of that letter, I am to request that you will be so good as to report whether it would be possible in framing rules for the introduction of the Bombay system to adopt the suggestions made by the

No. 1353, dated Calcutta, the 20th January 1886.

From—Captain A. W. Stiffe, I.M., Port Officer and Shipping Master, Calcutta,
To—The Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal, Municipal (Marine) Department.

In compliance with your letter No. 2472 of the 24th November last, I have the honour to submit herewith a set of draft rules based on the suggestions of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen for the introduction of the Bombay system of "continuous discharge" on voluntary principle at the port of Calcutta for foreign-going ships, together with forms of discharge certificates under Act I of 1859 (Form Nos. I and III) for your approval.

2. From these rules it will be seen that provision is made for keeping a register for the issue of copies to such as had lost their discharge certificates, as it would take a long time to make correct copies from the separate records of ships; meanwhile the men could not leave the port.

3. In rule 8 I have slightly deviated from the suggestions of the Committee, as it appears to me that a descriptive roll given to the broker mustering the crew on board would be of more service than cards to men themselves who are apt to mislay the same.

4. As regards paragraphs 4 and 5 of the letter from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce under reference, I think the suggestions made therein would be fatal to the scheme, as it would involve the presence on board of the entire native department, and thus cripple the office, which could only be met by a heavy outlay. Further, it would not be practicable to apply the system of continuous discharge to vessels employed in the Home Trade, as these do not ship and discharge their crews through the Shipping Office.

5. As recommended by the Committee, supervision and control over boarding-houses of native seamen would be an advantage; but this could not be done efficiently without the co-operation of the police and the appointment of an Inspector of such houses.

6. A small increase to the office establishment to keep up registers, &c., will be necessary.

7. The rules at first reading appear somewhat lengthy; but as I apprehend considerable difficulty and a good deal of opposition from those against whose interests the system will clash, it has appeared to me desirable to obtain to its details the sanction of Government.

Draft Rules for the introduction of the Continuous Discharge System for foreign going vessels at the Port of Calcutta.

It is the business of the Shipping Office to superintend and to facilitate engagement and discharge of seamen, and to secure the presence on board at proper times of men so engaged. With the view to carry out strictly, as far as practicable, the provisions of section 4 of Act I of 1859 relating thereto, the following rules are to be observed by the Shipping Office in the engagement and discharge of native seamen at the port of Calcutta:—

Engagement of Seamen.

1. Whenever a master of a vessel wants to ship a lascar crew, he should make it known to the Assistant Shipping Master, who will inform the licensed shipping broker, or the ghât serang (in the case of vessels which have their paid ghât serang), who, on receiving notice, will collect the men at the Shipping Office at the appointed day and time of shipping.

2. On the men being mustered at the Shipping Office, the master, or the person or persons whom he delegates, will select the crew, and as soon as this is done the men shall be brought before the Assistant Shipping Master, and drawn up in a line. The agreement (form sanctioned by the Governor-General in Council from time to time) will be read out to the crew in accordance with the provisions of Section XXII of Act I of 1859. The Assistant Shipping Master will question each man whether he is willing to go in terms of the agreement just read out. Those who answer in the negative will be told to clear out of the line, and the willing body taken one by one to the measuring standard. The clerk there will take [illegible] and note it on the face of the Form No. I, with other [illegible] for the purpose. He will

3. The licensed shipping broker will then pay to each of the crew the advance either in cash or in advance note (Form No. V) before the Assistant Shipping Master, deducting eight annas from each man for the certificate, which will be given to him after his term of service has expired, and at the same time will warn him that the serang has nothing to do with his wages, and that his future prospects as a seamen will depend on his discharge certificate.

The shipping clerk will then put the man on the ship's articles, noting the number of his certificate, and the seaman will sign his name or make his mark in the presence of the Assistant Shipping Master. After this is done, he will be told he is not wanted any longer.

Note—The same process is to be repeated in every case.

4. Thus, when all the men are put on the ship's articles, the shipping clerk will fill up the reverse of the certificates (Form No. I) in the columns marked for "Engagement," and have them attested by the Shipping Master, or his Deputy or Assistant, and then hand them over to the register-keeper, who will copy the same into the register (Form No. II) on the reverse in the appropriate columns.

5. When the certificates are copied into the register (Form No. II), each of them will be put into a tin case marked at the bottom c, bearing a number corresponding with the number of the certificate, and will then be securely tied into a bundle and delivered to the master, with instructions not to give the same to the seaman under any pretence, whatsoever, but to the Shipping Master at the port of discharge.

6. Should any member of the crew be left behind from his ship, in hospital or jail at any port during her voyage, on the ground of inability from illness, injury or imprisonment (not for desertion), the master, after filling up the columns marked "Discharge," will deliver the man's certificate to the Superintendent of Mercantile Marine of the Port, if in a British possession or colony, or, if in a foreign country, to Her Majesty's Britannic Consul, with the request to deliver the certificate to its owner on recovery or release, with his endorsement or in the case of the seaman's death, to forward it to the shipping officer at the port of engagement.

Note—Printed instructions to be given to masters to this effect, and which should be attached to every agreement.

7. At the time of the delivery of the tin cases, ship masters should also be directed by the Shipping Office to forward the certificates of all absentees under a cover addressed to the Shipping Master, who will write on the reverse of the certificate "Not joined," and also note the same in the register (Form No. II).

8. On the eve of mustering the crew on board, the licensed shipping broker will be supplied with a descriptive roll of the seamen shipped, bearing the register number, names personal marks, &c., who, on calling the muster roll, will compare each seaman with the "Descriptive roll," in order to ascertain whether the persons then on board and those who had signed articles at the Shipping Office are identical.

9. The licensed shipping broker will report within 24 hours the names of absentees and substitutes, and the Assistant Shipping Master will record the name of each man and substitute in a register (Form No. VI) for the purpose.

10. The shipping broker will prosecute all deserters under an authority from the ship's agents, and on their guaranteeing to pay all expenses including cost of arrest, attending court, &c.

11. The foregoing rules are to be observed in the case of seamen who, for the first time are shipping under the new system.

12. In the case of seamen shipping each time by rotation under a "Continuous discharge," all the above process is to be adhered to; only the measurement, &c., on the face of the Form No. I need not be taken.

Discharge of Seamen.

13. As soon as a vessel arrives at her final port of discharge, the master will produce at the Shipping Office his Official Log-book duly filled in, regarding the entries of conduct and ability, with the whole bundle of tin cases containing the discharge certificates.

14. The discharging clerk will take charge of these cases and open them one by one, and fill up carefully the particulars in the columns marked on the reverse of Form No. I "Discharge," and pass over the same to the register-keeper, who will at once copy the entries into the register (Form No. II) on its reverse in the appropriate columns.

15. Should the master decline to give the character of any seaman, the column for conduct and ability shall be marked with a cross (×) on the certificate as well as in the register. The entries in the certificates are to be signed by the master, and verified by the Shipping Master or his Deputy or Assistant.

16. In the event of a seaman being left behind from the ship, the discharge column in the register will be left blank, and will be filled up when the certificate comes to hand; and in the case of death of a seamen, the word "Dead" shall be written in red ink on the register, and the certificate destroyed.

17. On the date of discharge of the crew of a vessel, the master shall bring all his crew to the Shipping Office, and furnish each with an account of his wages, showing debits and made until the matter is adjusted. To those who answer in the affirmative, the balance may be paid before the Assistant Shipping Master, and the ship's release duly signed in his presence, and the discharge certificate will then be handed to him. Before leaving the pay-table, he will be told by the Assistant Shipping Master that the serang has no right to touch any portion of the money he has just received, and he will also be directed to keep his certificate carefully, as it will show in course of time his exact worth, and that he will not be dependent on the serang in securing employment, and that he can earn his livelihood by himself without the co-operation of others.

19. The serang will be made to wait before the Assistant Shipping Master at his pay-table, and will not be paid off till all the crew have left the Shipping Office premises.

20. When all the columns on the reverse of the Form No. I have been filled in, and there is no space for further entries, a second issue certificate (Form No. III) is to be given, and a register (Form No. IV) be kept, the words "Second issue certificate" being written on the column of remarks of the Form No. II. The process regarding engagement and discharge to be observed will be the same as in the case of men shipped by rotation under a "Continuous discharge certificate" under rule 12.

21. An index to each of the two registers (Form No. II and Form No. IV), showing the seaman's name and his registered number, is to be kept.

22. Should any seaman lose his discharge certificate, a copy shall be given him on payment of the fee of one rupee.

23. Those who do not wish to ship under a "Continuous discharge" will be shipped in the ordinary way as heretofore.

THE Government have decided, after a careful enquiry and consultation with the Bengal, Chamber of Commerce, to introduce the system of "Continuous discharge" of lascars at the Port of Calcutta, which will benefit the Shipping Companies at this Port. Agents of vessels are hereby requested to instruct masters of vessels consigned to them on the following points, viz., that in the selection of a crew to give preference to the holders of "Continuous discharge certificates," to make proper arrangements, to keep certificates on board, and to deliver the same to the Shipping Office on the termination of the voyage, together with the official log-book duly filled in as to character for conduct and ability of the men, to sign those entries in the certificate, and to help the Shipping Office in every possible way in giving effect to the new system.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1353, dated the 20th January last, with which you submit for approval a set of draft rules, based on the suggestions of the Committee appointed to enquire into the system of engaging native seamen in Calcutta, for the introduction at this port of the Bombay system of "Continuous discharges," on the voluntary principle, for foreign-going ships, together with forms of discharge certificates under Act I of 1859.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

ALEXANDER PEDLER,

Offg. Meteorological Reporter to the Govt. of Bengal.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL DURING THE MONTH OF MARCH 1886.

THE transition from the cold weather conditions to those of the hot season generally commences towards the end of February, so that the month of March in the Province of Bengal usually witnesses the complete establishment of the hot weather season. The area of maximum temperature in India is, in the cold-weather months, situated in the south of the Peninsula, but with the increasing altitude of the sun during February and March, the seat or focus of maximum temperature gradually advances northwards, or perhaps in a north-westerly direction, till in March it usually occupies the central parts of the Deccan, and as the month advances towards the end, and in the beginning of April, maximum temperature is usually found in the Central Provinces and Central India, and in parts of South-West Bengal, Behar, and Chutia Nagpur.

At the same time there is a steady and generally rapid increase of temperature of the atmosphere of the whole of Northern India, and this accompanies or perhaps probably produces a corresponding reduction of atmospheric pressure. Pressure which is lowest during the cold-weather months in the south of the Bay, where temperature is then highest, gradually gives way, and the seat of lowest pressure travels northwards till it occupies generally the Central Provinces and Chutia Nagpur, thus to a certain extent following the seat of maximum temperature.

With the northerly advance of the area of low pressure, and with the increasing difference of temperature between the plains of Bengal and the sea area, caused by the unequal heating effects of the sun's rays on the land and sea surface, the moist southerly and south-westerly winds, which blow over Bengal, become stronger and more constant, and they gradually penetrate over the greater part of the Province. At the same time, however, north-westerly and westerly winds still continue to blow from Upper India, and to influence a large part of Behar, though with the increasing temperature they become hot westerly winds. Easterly winds also blow down the Assam Valley, and their influence frequently extends as far west as Purneah and Durbhunga. Three converging systems of winds are thus present in Bengal, and by their interaction, or probably by the interaction of any two of them, it is believed the hot weather storms of Bengal, generally known as nor'-westers, are produced, though up to the present time our knowledge as to the formation and life history of these storms is very limited.

The normal features of the meteorology of March in Bengal are therefore rapidly increasing temperature, gradually decreasing pressure, a general increase in the air motion, great dryness of the air at the inland stations, and clear skies. These conditions are, however, as pointed out in the last paragraph, liable to be disturbed by the occurrence of storms which are generally local in character, and which give rise in many cases to rather heavy rain, though from the nature of the storms the rainfall is unevenly distributed. Occasionally, too, barometric depressions form over Northern India, and subsequently extending, they influence the weather in Behar, Chutia Nagpur, and North Bengal, giving rise to light to moderate rain. By these irregular or spasmodic actions a moderate amount of rain generally falls in Bengal during the month. The average rainfall of the month is least in Behar, where it is little more than a third of an inch. In Chutia Nagpur and Orissa it is a little less than an inch. In North Bengal the average rainfall is a little more than an inch, though the districts in and near the hills receive larger amounts than the plains. South-West Bengal receives an average amount of an inch and a quarter, while East Bengal receives about two and a half inches of rain.

The chief features in the meteorology of the past month have been—

1. An almost normal pressure, the mean difference for the province being an excess of less than a hundredth of an inch.
2. Temperature decidedly lower than the normal, the mean variation being a defect of nearly 1°.
3. Humidity and cloud proportion nearly normal, though the variations show these elements slightly in defect of the normal at most stations.
4. Two distinctly marked periods of disturbance during the month, the first lasting generally for two or three days, and occurring from about the 7th to the 10th, and the second period lasting about five days, and occurring generally from the 24th to the 29th.
5. Rainfall generally decidedly in excess of the normal, the only exception being in the North Behar district, where there has been a slight defect. For the whole province the mean rainfall shows an excess equal to 116 per cent. of the normal fall.

At the close of February and the commencement of the present month, conditions appeared to show the rapid approach of the hot weather season, but, on about the 4th of March, a distinct but shallow area of barometric depression formed over part of Behar and Chutia Nagpur, and this disturbed condition was followed by the formation of a few local [illegible] rain and in some cases by hail also, over Orissa, South-settled for a time, and north-westerly and westerly winds were general, the skies cleared, and humidity decreased, while rainfall was practically absent. From about 23rd instant conditions in Bengal became disturbed in a somewhat similar manner to that just described, and for a second period of about five days local storms accompanied by rain became rather general, but in this second period rainfall in North Bengal and North Behar was almost absent. Finally, from about the 28th or 29th of March, except in parts of East and North Bengal, these disturbances disappeared, and the ordinary hot weather conditions again set in.

As has been previously indicated, the mean pressure of the province for the month has been very nearly normal, and the average variation is an excess of only 0·008″. Very considerable fluctuations of pressure have, however, been recorded for the month, and thus in the first week there was a mean defect of 0·049″, while at Gya the defect was 0·083″. In the second week this defect was more than compensated, and an excess pressure of 0·085″ was registered, while at some stations the excess was more than a tenth of an inch. In the third week there was a general excess of 0·043″, which was smallest in East Bengal and largest in North Bengal, and finally for the last twelve days of the month pressure was in defect by 0·037″. This gives a general excess of a little less than a hundredth of an inch. The distribution of this variation for the month has been fairly regular, but the eastern and northern districts showed relatively a larger excess than the southern and western districts. At the close of the month, however, the distribution of pressure was rather anomalous: Orissa and South-West Bengal showed a defect of nearly 0·03,″ while North Behar showed an excess of almost equal amount.

Temperature.—Variations during the month have been exceptionally large. In the week ending the 5th of March, the mean temperature over the whole province was between 4° and 5° above the normal. In the second week temperature fell rapidly, and it averaged 3·4° below the normal. In the week ending the 19th the defect had decreased to 1·8°; in the next week temperature was practically normal; and finally at the close of the month temperature had become about 2·8° below the normal. For the whole month the mean temperature has been decidedly in defect in all districts except North Behar, where a very small excess temperature (0·4°) has been registered. In all other districts the defect has varied from 1° up to 1·7,° and the mean temperature of the whole province has been a little less than 1° below the normal.

Rainfall.—Has been to a great extent brought by local storms, and has been confined to the two periods above mentioned. Rainfall has been very considerably in excess of the normal in Orissa, South-West Bengal and South Behar. Fairly large amounts have also been received in East Bengal and Chutia Nagpur. North Bengal has received decidedly more than the normal fall, while North Behar has registered a slightly defective fall. Expressed as a percentage of the normal fall for the period, the rainfall for March in Orissa has equalled 444 per cent; in South-West Bengal it has been 240 per cent; in South Behar it has averaged 237 per cent; in Chutia Nagpur the fall has equalled 196 per cent; in East Bengal 180 per cent., and in North Bengal 125 per cent. Finally, in North Behar the rainfall registered has only been 92 per cent. of the normal amount. The number of rainy days during the month has also largely exceeded those in normal years, and thus, while for this month at all stations the average number of days on which rain has fallen has been 4·1, the normal number for the period is only 2·4.

Notwithstanding that the average rainfall has been fairly abundant during the month, a good many stations, particularly in North Behar, show comparatively small rainfall, and in some cases no rain at all. Thus the following stations in this district report absolutely no rain in March :—Maliara, Kaliagunge, Soopool, Protabgunge, Tajpore, Madhubani, Sinhar and Barhurwa. In other divisions, however, the rainfall has been fairly evenly distributed.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven Meteorological Divisions of the Province for the month of March 1886 :—

CALCUTTA, the 12th April 1886.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING FRIDAY, THE 9TH OF APRIL 1886.

THE weather conditions over the province during the past week do not call for much comment. For the whole of this period in all districts except East, South-West and North Bengal ordinary hot weather conditions have obtained, skies have been clear or only lightly clouded, temperature has been high, humidity at the interior stations has been low, and rainfall has been entirely absent. In the other three districts, weather conditions have been disturbed, but while the disturbance has been only slight in South-West and North Bengal, the disturbed conditions have been more pronounced and prolonged in East Bengal. A few local storms accompanied by rain have been reported from South-West and North Bengal, while storms have been comparatively frequent in almost all districts of East Bengal, and this has been particularly the case during the last two or three days of the week.

The changes of pressure have, however, been rather considerable during the week; on the 3rd it was rising slowly at almost all stations, but this was followed on the 4th instant by a general fall. On the following day the changes were a little variable, and on the 6th pressure was rising. A decidedly rapid fall commenced on the 7th, which continued on the 8th, and this apparently accompanied the existence of the disturbed conditions in East Bengal, but on the 9th pressure rose and the disturbances to a great extent ceased. For the whole week the pressure has not varied much from the normal except in North Behar, where there has been a considerable excess. In this district pressure has been 0·065″ above the normal, while the mean pressure for the whole province has only been slightly in excess. In Chutia Nagpur and in some parts of Orissa and South-West Bengal pressure has indeed been below the normal.

The temperature during the past week has been remarkably low for the time of year, and for the first two or three days there was a decided fall, though there was a subsequent increase. The comparatively low temperature for the week has been particularly well marked in South Behar, where the temperature has been no less than 8·6° below the normal for the period. In North Behar the defect has been 6°, in Chutia Nagpur 5·4°, and in South-West Bengal 4·3°. In other districts the defect has been smaller, and is less than 2°. For the whole province the defect from the normal is equal to about 4·5°.

Rainfall, as above stated, has been fairly abundant in East Bengal, and in this division almost all districts have received good rainfall. This division averages 2·15 inches for the week against a normal fall of 0·64 inch. The rainfall in North Bengal has been very much smaller, and only amounts to an average of 0·21 inch, while the normal fall for the period is 0·37 inch. The rainfall in North Bengal has, however, been very local, and it has been practically confined to the Rungpore, Pubna and Bogra districts. In South-West Bengal the rainfall has been even smaller, and only averages 0·12 inch for the week against the normal 0·35 inch. In South-West Bengal also the rainfall has been very local in character, and it has been practically confined to the 24-Pergunnahs and Khoolna districts. All other divisions, namely Orissa, Chutia Nagpur and the whole of Behar have been rainless during the week.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Friday, the 9th of April 1886:—

General Remarks on the fluctuation of principal staples carried over the East Indian Railway during 4 weeks ended 27th February 1886.

INCREASES.

Coal, up and down.—The increase in the upward coal was due to demands for the Oudh and Rohilkund and the Bengal and North-Western Railways, and that in the downward traffic to special contracts in Calcutta.

Cotton.—Plentiful crops and an active demand for export led to the increase in this commodity.

Wheat.—The increase in this staple was due to demands for export and also for local consumption, old stocks being disposed of.

Gram and Pulses.—Due to despatches to Howrah for shipment to Madras and to stations on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway vid Jubbulpore.

Rice (husked and unhusked).—Plentiful harvest on the Loop line this year and larger demand in Lower Bengal led to this increase.

Other rain and spring crops.—This increase is attributable to good demand in Oudh and the North-Western Provinces.

Railway material, foreign.—Larger despatches from Howrah for the Behar-Assam State, Tirhoot State, Oudh and Rohilkund, and the Bengal and North-Western Railways account for the increase in this staple.

Sugar (refined and unrefined). A good outturn and favorable prices increased the despatches from the Shahabad district.

Government Stores.—Movement of Ordnance and Commissariat stores after the breaking up of the Camp of Exercise at Delhi accounts for this increase.

Seeds.—This increase was principally in mustard, castor and poppy seeds, owing to brisk demands from Calcutta and Bombay.

DECREASES.

Piece-goods.—This is merely a re-action consequent on large despatches during the previous month.

Lac.—Dull market in Calcutta accounts for this decrease.

Iron.—Due to ordinary fluctuation of trade.

Opium.—The increase in last month accounts for the present falling off.

Salt.—Nearly three-fourths of this decrease was due to the failure of the supplies from the Sambhar lakes, and a small decrease at Howrah owing to river steamer competition.

Saltpetre.—Due to want of demand in the Calcutta market for this commodity.

Separate accounts, under section 10 of Act XI of 1859, were opened in respect of the 3 shares from which arrears are due. These shares were once put up to sale for arrears of revenue on the 5th January last, and the bid at which the said shares were knocked down was below the amount due to Government. Against this sale an appeal was preferred to the Commissioner of the division, who upset the sale on the 19th March last on grounds of illegality, and directed to take steps under section 14 of the sale law. Accordingly a notice was served upon the proprietors, but no one paid the arrears. Hence the entire mehal is now advertized for sale.

Rules for the supply of maps and for the execution of Lithographic or Photographic work on the public service or on payment.

Supply of printed Maps.

1. The Map Record and Issue Office, Calcutta, supplies printed maps from stock on book-debit on the public service. It also arranges for the colouring and mounting of maps when required, but work of this description must be paid for in cash, as well as charges for packing cases, carriage, and postage.

2. Maps can also be obtained from the above-mentioned Office on payment prepaid, as well as from the following local Agents, who, however, have no authority to issue maps on the public service:—

Allahabad—Curator of Government Books.
Ahmedabad—Huzoor Deputy Collector.
Lahore—Curator of Government Books.
Madras—Messrs. Higginbotham & Co.
Nagpore—Curator of Government Books.
Poona—Supdt., Govt. Photozincographic Dept.
Rajkot—Mr. Narsinji Sunderji.
Rangoon—Curator of Government Books.
Simla—Messrs. Williams and Co

3. All applications for maps on the public service should be made to the Assistant Surveyor-General, in charge of the Map Record and Issue Office, 13, Wood Street, Calcutta, and should give full particulars as to the kind of map and its scale, and any other information that will guide this Office in knowing exactly what is required.

4. The mode of transit and address or station to which the maps are to be sent should invariably be specified.

Indent forms for maps on the public service can be obtained from the Assistant Surveyor-General, in charge of the Surveyor-General's Office.

6. Lists of all newly published maps are periodically notified in the Gazettes of India and Local Governments.

Requisitions for Lithographic or Photographic work.

7. The Lithographic and Photographic Offices at Calcutta reproduce maps, plans, and drawings by lithography and by photography on book-debit on the public service, and on cash payment in certain special cases only. The Trigonometrical Branch Office at Dehra Dun does not, as a rule, undertake work for other departments.

8. As a rule, drawings in line can be reproduced by photozincography if suitably drawn in accordance with instructions, which may be obtained on application to the Assistant Surveyor-General, Photographic Office, No. 1, Wood Street, Calcutta. Coloured and other drawings unsuitable for photozincography must be lithographed, but the cost is considerably greater.

9. Photographs if required in large numbers can be cheaply reproduced by the photo-collotype and heliogravure processess from suitable negatives.

10. All applications for Lithographic or Photographic work on the public service should, if possible, be submitted in the following form which is not required in duplicate. Blank forms may be obtained on application to the Assistant Surveyor-General, Surveyor-General's Office :—

INDENT NO. on the $\frac{\text{Lithographic}}{\text{Photographic}}$ Office, S. I. Dept., for _____ to be reproduced by _____ for the use of _____ dated _____ 188 .

Description of Map or drawing.	Number of original sheets.	Scale.	Scale of reproduction.	Number of copies required.	Quality and size of paper to be printed on.	Purpose for which required.	How and where to be despatched and other special instructions.
							The address which should be affixed to the parcels or cases, to be distinctly given in full. Abbreviations sometimes lead to mistakes.

I do hereby certify that the maps, &c., specified in this indent are indispensably necessary to the best of my knowledge and belief, after the most careful examination.

Recommended.

Countersignature of approving authority. Signature of Indenting Officer, with designation of appointment in full.

11. All necessary information as to the scale of reproduction, number of copies required, quality and size of paper, mode of transit, and address to which proofs and printed copies are to be despatched, should be shown on the face of the indent and not in a covering letter, unless more explanation is required than can be given on the face of the indent.

12. All indents must be duly approved and countersigned by the heads of departments, or the Government under which indenting officers may be serving, before they can be supplied, viz.,—

Survey of India Department, Trigonometrical Branch, by Deputy Surveyor-General Ditto ditto Topographical ditto ,, ditto Ditto ditto Revenue ditto ,, ditto	or by Surveyor-General.

Public Works Department,	,, Superintending Engineers or higher authorities, and they should be addressed to the Assistant Surveyor-General, in charge of the Lithographic and Photographic Offices, Calcutta, at No. 1, Camac Street, and No. 1, Wood Street, respectively.

13. Lithographic and Photographic work will be undertaken on behalf of Municipalities, Port Trusts, Railway Companies, the Trustees, Indian Museum, and other quasi-official bodies for cash payment on indents in the form prescribed above. Private work cannot be undertaken except in very special cases, when it cannot possibly be done otherwise, and when the Office can take it up without inconvenience. On such work an extra charge of 10 per cent. will be made over and above the usual rates. In all cases where cash payment is required, an estimate will be given and the amount must be remitted before the work can be put in hand.

14. As a rule, maps and drawings reproduced by lithography or photography are not coloured, but in special cases where colouring is essential, it can be arranged for on cash payment, as prescribed under Rule 1. Packing and transit charges must also be paid by indentors.

15. To enable the indenting officer, as well as the officer who countersigns and finally passes an indent, to know the cost involved thereby, the average ordinary price of each description of work executed in the Lithographic or Photographic Offices is given in the annexed list.

16. Indents should be regulated, not according to what an officer would like to have, but what is absolutely necessary. It is not always economy to have maps and drawings reproduced on as small a scale as possible.
